ANTI-ANFU TUCHUNATE ASKS CHIN TO RETURN

Premier's Re-instatement Is First Move Of Chang Tso-lin

SEES CHANG HSUN

Mukden Chief Calls On Monarchist Before Visiting President

THREATENSFORCE

Would Take Up Arms If Anfu Club Blocks His Way In Peking

The settlement of the Cabinet crisis is an initial attempt to break the Anfu hold on Peking by Chang Tso-lin, Mukden chief of the anti-Anfu Tuchunate who marched to the Capital Saturday with a battalion of infantry and a company of machine guns. He saw President Hsu Sunday morning. An hour later, he visited Premier Chin Yung-peng and urged him to cancel his leave.

The conference with Old Hsu dwelled on the Cabinet crisis, which Chang considered as the main cause of friction between the Anfu and Chihli factions. He told Hsu that his main mission was to find an amicable settlement of the dispute between the President and the Anfu war lord, Tuan Chi-jui. If that fails, he intimated he would resort to force.

The questions of the internal peace conference and the Hunan situation were also discussed. Chang favored the recall of both Tuchun Chang Ching-yao and General Wang Yi-tang, Anfu leaders.

COHORTS ARE THERE

Following his arrival in Peking, numerous Fengtien troops in civilian clothes have thronged the hotels and lodging houses in Peking, Tientsin, Langfang and Haitien. His three responsible advisors, Chin Hua, Yu Chung-han and Chin Ting-hsun, also followed him to the capital.

Chang's call on Chang Hsun, the monarchist, on Saturday, before seeing any other important personage in Peking has been made the subject of much adverse criticism in official circles. The Anfuites are spreading the rumor that another monarchial restoration is under way.

A significant move in the general situation is the despatch of one regiment of General Wu Pei-fu's troops from Sincheng to Machang, Chihli, by order of General Tsao Kun, who arrived in Peking Sunday. Another brigade of Wu's forces has been sent to Tientsin from Sincheng.

No efforts are being spared by General Tsao Kun to entertain the troops of Wu at both places.

The bodyguards of Chang Tso-ling have taken up their quarters at the Hua Shih Bridge, Peking. Machine guns have also been moved to the scene, where numerous tents have been erected.

RESUME PARLEYS SOON

Plans for the resumption of the internal peace conference are now complete. As soon as the associate Northern peace delegates arrive in Shanghai, the sessions will be held at the former German Club. The delegates have telegraphed that they would leave Peking within the next few days.

The committee in charge of the resumption appointed jointly by General Wang Yi-tang and Mr. Tang Shao-yi, the peace envoys, has found the necessary documents in order and has arranged so that the conference may be called any day.

Thirty-five Parliamentarians in Shanghai have circulated a telegram throughout the country, declaring their opposition against the change of the Southern peace delegate as proposed by the Tsen Administration in Canton.

They maintain that Mr. Tang Shao-yi is the only logical man to represent the Constitutionalists, and that the dispute between the different directors of the Adminis-

Will Form Local Chinese Ratepayers' Association At Meeting At 'Y' Today

Shanghai Organisations Are Invited To Send Delegates To Inaugurate Civic Body At Session To Be Held Under Auspices Of Street Unions

An initial meeting, held for the purpose of the establishment of an association for Chinese ratepayers, will take place this afternoon at 1 o'clock at the Chinese Y.M.C.A.

The meeting is called by the Shanghai Federated Street Unions, and the recognised Chinese organisations of Shanghai have been invited to send delegates to the meeting. Notices of the organization of the new body have been inserted in the Chinese press.

Besides the formal inauguration of the association, the meeting will devise means of electing the five members to the Chinese advisory board of the Municipal Council, created at the recent ratepayers' meeting.

In a circular addressed to the Shanghai organisations, the Street Union points out that the most representative Chinese residents should be deputised to serve on the board, which was created after a great deal of sacrifice on the part of the union.

With that in view, the Union wishes to ask all the bodies in Shanghai to be represented at the forthcoming meeting, in order that the most competent men may be selected to represent the Chinese community in the city.

Various street unions held meetings yesterday to select their delegates.

THE CIRCULAR

The following was the circular sent yesterday by the Federated Street Unions to the organisations, inviting them to participate at today's meeting:

"The question of municipal representation was first brought up by our union. After several months of vigorous struggle, and after considerable sacrifice, we have succeeded in attaining the first step of our object, namely the creation of an advisory committee to the Municipal Council.

"It has been over two months since the Council had caused this committee to be created by the ratepayers. Since it is a matter which concerns all the Chinese ratepayers, our Union has refrained from claiming the entire benefit and at the same time has held that no single organisation in Shanghai should be privileged to elect them among themselves.

FUNCTION IMPORTANT

"The function of the committee is important and the members should be men of wisdom and integrity, and should be competent to be representative of the public will of the ratepayers. The election should therefore be thrown open to all the ratepayers and the method of election must necessarily conform to recognised usage and to law.

"It is therefore suggested that a meeting be called of delegates from all recognised organisations on Tuesday, June 22, at 1 o'clock at the Chinese Y. M. C. A., for the purpose of organising the ratepayers and devise means of electing the members of the committee.

"Beside inserting notices in the press, we hereby invite your organisation to be sure to send representatives."

CHINA TO REJECT SECOND JAP NOTE FOR DIRECT DEAL

China must have a voice in all treaties and alliances which concern her sovereignty. This is gist of the note to be sent to Japan in reply to the second note inviting China's negotiation over the Shantung controversy.

The note points out that it is contrary to all principles of international law that a third country could be held responsible for any treaty signed by two other countries.

Since China had refused to attach her signature to the German treaty of peace, she had definitely refused to observe any or all of its stipulations.

Therefore Japan, the reply will say, should not have ignored her refusal, and again invited her to direct negotiations regarding a contract of which China is not a party.

As to the question of the withdrawal of Japanese troops from Chinese soil, continues the note, all forces should have been withdrawn by now as the hostile acts between the Allies and Germany have long since been terminated.

The message concludes by saying that the training of Chinese police in Shantung for guarding the railways is a separate issue and need not be considered at the same time with the question of the withdrawal of Japanese soldiers along those lines.

Wireless Strike Is At Deadlock

(Reuter's Service)

London, June 18.—Speaking at the annual meeting of the Marconi Company today, Mr. Godfrey Isaacs stated that the demands of the wireless operators represented an expenditure of £500,000 annually.

He declared that, as long as the strikers committed breaches of agreement and threatened to hold up the whole of the mercantile shipping of the country, no conference was possible.

GRANTS A BOON

London, June 18.—The Board of Trade has notified shipowners that in view of the urgent importance of free movement of shipping, no steps would be taken against ships sailing without wireless operators during the continuance of the strike.

24 U.S. TREATIES ENDANGERED BY NEW MERCHANT MARINE BILL

REVERSAL OF FREE TRADE

Attempts To Offset Big Subsidies Scored As Reversal Of Policy

(Reuter's Service)

Washington, June 18.—About twenty-four commercial treaties with the United States will probably have to be denounced, either wholly or in part, under the terms of the new Merchant Marine Bill.

Telegrams received from Europe indicate that representations to the United States Government in this connection are deemed necessary but they do not yet appear to have been made, although there have been discussions between the State Department and officials of the Shipping Board and the Diplomatic representatives of certain marine powers.

COMPLETE REVERSAL

The Bill contemplates the complete reversal of the American policy of free, reciprocal treatment of foreign shipping. The new law authorises the imposition of discriminating tonnage dues on foreign vessels entering American ports, with the object of being a set-off to the extensive subsidies, alleged to have been granted to their shipping firms by other Powers.

MAY SEND PROTEST

New York, June 16.—The Washington correspondent of the Associated Press states that it is believed that Great Britain's objections to the enforcement of the American Mercantile Marine Bill are likely to be the subject of formal representations to the State Department.

The objections are understood to be based primarily on two sections of the measure. One of these sections prohibits the carrying of merchandise in other than American ships between American ports via a foreign port, which will prevent the carriage of freight between points in the United States and Alaska over Canadian railroads or in Canadian ships.

The other section directs the President to terminate as soon as possible under their terms all treaties, restricting the rights of the United States to impose discriminatory duties on foreign shipping entering American ports.

SPECIAL COMMITTEE

London, June 17.—The Premier has appointed an Imperial Shipping Committee to inquire into the whole question of shipping communications between the different parts of the Empire with a view to their improvement. Sir H. J. Mackinder, M.P., has been appointed Chairman and all the Dominion Governments have nominated their own representatives. Mr. H. B. Larkin will represent Australia, the High Commissioner, New Zealand, and Captain G. Bowden, South Africa.

JAPAN AROUSED

(Japan Advertiser)

"With regard to the merchant marine bill of America," says an authority in the Department of Communications, "a brief despatch has been received by the Foreign Office from Mr. Shidehara, the Japanese Ambassador in Washington, to the effect that the bill passed Congress on June 5 and that the President signed the bill immediately on its passage. But no definite information has yet been received regarding the amendments made, and it is difficult to say what effect will be produced on Japan's shipping when the American bill is carried into effect. It is doubtful whether information said to have been received by the Nippon Yusen Kaisha, the Osaka Shosen Kaisha, and other shipping companies is absolutely correct, and we regret that we cannot repose unqualified confidence in that information. It is not difficult, however, to guess the amendments that may have been made.

WHERE IT HURTS

"In any case, from Japan's point of view, the most important features of the American bill are the following points:

"1. That freight rates on goods carried by American ships be reduced under special Customs tariff arrangements.

"2. That a special railway freight rebate be granted on goods carried by American ships.

"3. That the coasting trade of America be reserved exclusively to American ships, and that the

TURKS OPEN FIRE ON BRITISHERS, BREAKING FAITH

Guarantee Safety; Then Shoot Into Main Body Of Retiring Troops

(Reuter's Service)

Constantinople, June 17.—A British outpost on the Ismid front, consisting of a company of Punjabis, was suddenly surrounded by a superior force of Turkish Nationalists. The British officer in command decided to withdraw, the Nationalist commander agreeing not to hamper his retirement. The advance guard was allowed to pass without mishap but the Nationalists treacherously opened fire on the main body, wounding thirty men and taking prisoner the intelligence officer.

Reinforcements were hurried up, while a British warship kept the Nationalists at bay by shelling their positions. It appears that Mustapha Kemal, the Nationalist leader, is much chagrined at the British barring his way to Scutari but whether he or the local commander ordered the attack is at present unknown.

FIFTEEN KILLED

Constantinople, June 18.—It now appears that the British force had 15 killed and 23 wounded in the fighting at Ismid.

A detachment of the Golden Highlanders went to the assistance of the Punjabis whom they extricated without further casualties.

The guns of the British warships are believed to have inflicted heavy punishment on the Nationalists, who are commanded by Ali Fuad Pasha, the Commander of the 20th Corps, which was engaged in the fighting against the British in Palestine.

It appears that a general attack against the British in the Ismid area is contemplated.

VICE-ADMIRAL LEAVES

Constantinople, June 18.—Vice-Admiral Sir John de Robeck has left for Ismid. A Scottish regiment has been despatched to that front and two British cruisers have already arrived off the town. A French warship has arrived at Heraclea.

FRENCH TO RETIRE

Paris, June 10.—According to a telegram from Constantinople the French Colonial troops, stationed at Constantinople will be withdrawn as soon as the British have occupied the new frontier of Turkey in Europe.

EVACUATING ISMID

Constantinople, June 19.—Several encounters have occurred between the Turkish Nationalists and British troops in the district of Ismid. Native Christians and foreigners are being evacuated.

No Germans Need Apply At Genoa

(Reuter's Service)

Genoa, June 18.—A proposal to appoint a German delegate, named Doring, a member of the Committee caused an angry scene at the International Seamen's Conference today. Mr. Havelook Wilson (Great Britain) declared that Doring did not represent seamen, as he had favored submarine warfare. The Belgian delegates threatened to leave if Doring were appointed. The proposal was rejected.

30 ON BOARD

Genoa, June 18.—The Seamen's Conference has decided to appoint a commission of 30 members, equally composed of Government delegates, shipowners and seamen, to consider the convention with regard to the laws of labor, drafted by Sir Montague Barlow, M.P., and also a commission of 21 members to discuss the question of seamen's contracts and to draft a convention, dealing with unemployment.

NO RECOGNITION FOR SOVIETS BY AMERICAN LABOR SAYS CONVENTION

SCORES PACT WITH JAPAN

Votes For Federal Supervision And Operation Of The U. S. Railroads

(Reuter's Service)

Montreal, June 16.—The American Federation of Labor Congress after a heated debate defeated the motion, asking the United States to recognise the Soviet Government and to lift the blockade against Russia.

A telegram from Mr. Bainbridge Colby, the Secretary of State, contributed to this decision. He stated that the Soviet Government insisted on political recognition as a condition of the renewal of any commercial contract.

Mr. Colby declared that the present regime in Russia did not represent the will of any considerable portion of the Russian people. "It repudiates," he added, "every principle of harmonious and trustful relations between nations and individuals. It is based on the negation of honor and good faith and undermined the structure of international law."

The Federation passed a resolution, calling upon Congress to cancel the "Gentleman's Agreement" with Japan and to exclude Japanese and other Asiatics from immigration. The Convention also demanded the exclusion of the so-called "picture brides," namely prospective wives, chosen by photograph from Japan.

SUPPORTS STRIKE

Montreal, June 16.—The American Federation of Labor Congress has pledged itself to support the longshoremen, who are on strike on the Atlantic and Gulf of Mexico coasts, in their fight for recognition.

The Federation also passed a resolution, demanding the repeal of the compulsory arbitration sections of the American Railroad Law and expressed itself opposed to compulsory military service.

The Building Trades Organisation of the Federation at a separate meeting declared war on the principle of "One Big Union" for Canada had agreed to send representatives from each of twenty international building trade unions to Winnipeg and other cities to open this campaign. It was announced that it had been decided to revoke the charters of all unions, failing to expel "One Big Union" members.

WITH DEMOCRATS

Montreal, June 18.—The American Federation of Labor after a very bitter fight has endorsed government ownership and Democratic operation of American railroads.

Amid applause the Federation passed a resolution, re-affirming its stand for the recognition of the Irish Republic and urging that the military forces of occupation in Ireland should be withdrawn and that the Irish people should be accorded the right of self-determination.

FIGHT PROFITEERS

Montreal, June 19.—The American Federation of Labor has decided to fight "criminal profiteering" and the high cost of living by means of the co-operative movement, and has pledged its assistance in the formation of societies for the establishment and operation of co-operative stores.

American Actress Now Guarded By Police In England

LAURETTE TAYLOR

A special corps of London police have been drafted for duty at the Garrick Theater, where Miss Laurette Taylor, petite American actress, is starring in Hartley Manners's play, "A Night in Rome."

The precaution is taken to guard against a possible renewal of the rioting which marred the opening of the play in London, when a gang of hoodlums in the gallery of the theater brought the play to a premature end.

It has been established, according to a report from London, that the affair was the outcome of a plot to wreck the production, and not a demonstration against any individual. When the play opened the hoodlums started throwing pennies, stinkballs and snuff on the stage.

JAPANESE ARE CAPTURED WITH $25,000 DRUGS

Chinese Police Seize Two Bags Filled With Big Store Of Morphia

Two Japanese, one said to be a prominent merchant here, were arrested at 3 o'clock yesterday morning and morphia valued at $25,000 was taken from them. They were haled before the Japanese consular court yesterday and the case was remanded.

Two Chinese police constables saw the Japanese proceeding along Broadway in rickshas and noted that they were carrying handbags and that a crowd of loafers was pursuing them. Suspecting drug-smuggling they summoned three other officers and proceeded to question the Japanese.

Because the answers of the suspects were not satisfactory the police took the Nipponese to the Hongkew police station, where their bags were searched. Morphia estimated to be worth the sum mentioned was discovered and the men were sent to court.

ONE UNDER CONTROL

London, June 18.—A forest fire, which started on Wednesday last near Aboyne, is now under control. The town of Aboyne was saved from destruction by the deliberate burning of the Aboyne deer-forest. Another large fire has started in the Rothiemurchus forest, Invernessshire.

Americans Extend New French Credits

(Reuter's Service)

Paris, June 17.—The Matin states that American firms have sold 75,000 tons of copper to French firms on credits, amounting to $35,000,000. Importance is attached to the fact that the Federal Reserve Bank agreed to advance loans to American business men in the deal on the sole guarantee of a French Bank.

This is said to be the first of a series of gigantic commercial deals with a view to obtaining the export of raw materials and machinery without further affecting the exchange rate in New York.

IMPORTERS HEAVILY HIT BY VAGARIES OF EXCHANGE

Tls.60,000,000 Estimate Of Loss To Dealers Here In Year

APPEAL FOR HELP

British And American Chambers Asked To Avert Panic

WAYS SUGGESTED

Buyers Seek To Cancel Recent Contracts And Delay Old Ones

Shanghai Chinese importers assert that they will suffer Tls. 60,000,000 damage during the coming fiscal year if exchange remains at the present rate. This is the estimate made by the officers of the newly inaugurated Importers' Exchange Maintenance Association, consisting of over 300 local importers in woolen and cotton piece goods, hardware, chemicals, machinery and foreign provisions.

Committees of the British and American Chambers of Commerce will meet today to consider letters which have been addressed to them by the Chinese Chamber of Commerce, suggesting the extension of time of delivery of contracts for which goods have been shipped and the cancellation of those whose goods have not been shipped.

INAUGURATE EXCHANGE

To devise means of averting bankruptcies among the import dealers, the Chinese have inaugurated the Importers' Exchange Maintenance Association, in letters addressed to the British and American Chambers by the Chinese Chamber, it is stated that communications have been received from the new body as well as the Ningpo Guild, the Woolen Piece Goods Association and 99 individual dealers, making two suggestions.

The gist of the suggestions amounted to (1) the extension of the time of delivery by six months for all goods already shipped, the purchasers offering to pay interest on the extended credit; and (2) the cancellation of all contracts for which the goods have not yet been shipped by the manufacturers.

INDIVIDUALS CANVASSED

Prior to the letter addressed by the Chinese Chamber of Commerce, communications have already been sent to individual foreign merchants by guilds and dealers, making similar overtures.

Goods were ordered when the tael was quoted at eight or nine shillings, or between 140 and 150 gold for every 100 taels. Today, the importer is faced with the arrival of the cargo at the rate of 4/10 or 96 cents per tael—less than two-thirds of the original value.

BOUND TO ASSIST

The Chinese argue that the foreign commission houses are morally bound to assist them by granting the two requests; because, if not, they will be forced to go out of business as a body and the foreign importers will also suffer.

Moreover, they maintain that such cancellations and extensions of credit are practiced in other countries whose governments would even legalise the measure by prohibiting the importation of any or all foreign goods for a given time.

On the other hand, foreign importers say that the Chinese, by concluding his contract with the foreign merchant without settling his exchange, is speculating on the rate and he has no one but himself to blame.

Their argument is that the Chinese merchant would have pocketed the difference, if exchange had gone up in his favor, and said nothing about it. Many new speculators have entered the market and they have been gambling in exchange, reaping good profits for a while but being unable to bear their present losses.

They should, the argument concludes, have protected themselves against the depression.

Against this the Chinese say that very few firms in Shanghai could have settled on the exchange at the time when the contracts were signed. Even the dealers of many years' standing they say, could not have afforded to have their money tied up that way.

There are now more than 1,000 piece goods dealers in Shanghai. Formerly there were only 100.

SIMILAR PANIC

It has been pointed out that a panic of a minor scale of similar nature took place some time ago in Tientsin and was averted through the organisation of a bank, by foreign as well as Chinese importers, which extended the necessary amount of credit to the Chinese, thus spreading the loss over a number of years.

As the result of the losses, certain local Chinese organisations are again agitating the adoption of a gold standard.

RESTLESSNESS APPARENT

"Doubtless you are aware of the sudden drop in the rate of exchange and the restlessness caused by it among the Chinese merchants. Realising the gravity of the situation, the undersigned have been trying to devise some means whereby the total collapse of the commercial situation may be avoided.

"The danger, in view of the present circumstance, is inevitable and not only will the Chinese merchants suffer tremendous losses, but many of the foreign traders in China will be seriously affected.

"For the sake of maintaining our business relationship and the happy intercourse enjoyed between us for the last decade, we beg to request you and other firms to extend the time of delivery of all contracts signed up-to-date, by six months.

WILL AVERT PANIC

"Allow us this period of time within which to strengthen our financial position and you will directly benefit us and, indirectly, yourselves.

"As a further request, we ask that you cancel all contracts signed on or after January 1, 1920, in order to diminish the amount of damage which both you and we are called upon to face.

"Needless for us to add that, in complying with our request, you will not only help us in remaining solvent but assist yourselves to continue the business relations with the many business men of our trade."

SOOCHOW SATIN WEAVERS STRIKE FOR HIGHER PAY

Employers Yield To Their Demand And Strikers Returned Yesterday

(China Press Correspondence)

Soochow, June 20.—The modern weapon of a general strike for raising laborer wages was effectively used by over 10,000 satin weavers in this peaceful city last week-end. As a result, the employers are now paying 90 coppers for skilled and 45 coppers for unskilled laborers in the trade. The rise in the price of rice was the main cause for the general dissatisfaction.

Ever since the price of the cereal hit the $9 mark the workers have been restless and several times have threatened to strike. In spite of the establishment of many cheap-sale exchanges for the benefit of the poor and the working classes, there have been mutterings of trouble.

WALKED OUT

Last Thursday, the weavers walked out from the factories and promptly held a meeting in the Hsia Chang (Satin Weavers') guild.

Resolutions were passed to address a demand to their employers for higher wages.

The satin shop-keepers called a meeting with equal readiness, and it was decided, after a short discussion, that the demand should be acceded to, in order to relieve the situation.

The decision was considered by the strikers as satisfactory, and they returned to their employment yesterday.

LEAGUE ALREADY HELPING WORLD, IS CLAIMED BY BRITISH ORATORS

Balfour Emphasises Need Of World Disarmaments; Lloyd George On U.S.A.

SUPPRESSING DISEASE

No Opportunity For League To Interfere In Polish Embroglio, Is Claim

(Reuter's Service)

London, June 17.—In the House of Commons today, replying to Col. John Gretton, Mr. Cecil Harmsworth, Parliamentary Under Secretary for Foreign Affairs, stated that the members of the League of Nations had hitherto contributed £170,000 to its funds.

Speaking on the vote for the British Embassies and Consular services, under which expenses for the League fall, Mr. Balfour claimed that the League had already performed considerable services to the world. The permanent secretariat of the League would remain at London until the meeting of the League in November, when its future would be decided. Mr. Balfour mentioned that offices had been established for registration of treaties. Henceforward no treaty would be valid unless it had been registered and was open for inspection.

The question of the division of expenses among members of the League would be submitted to experts at the International Financial Conference at Brussels.

SUPPORT DISARMAMENT

Dealing with the four permanent committees, established under the League, on armaments, health, transit, and international justice respectively, Mr. Balfour emphasised the importance of the work of the armaments committee but pointed out that everything depended on the nations supporting the policy of disarmament. If each nation declined to adopt disarmament on the ground that armaments were necessary for its security, then the tragedy for the League of Nations and the world would be great indeed.

Referring to the work of the League of Nations in connection with the Peace Treaty Mr. Balfour mentioned the appointment of the Commission to delimit the Saar Valley and also of the international body to administer the Saar Valley. The League had appointed a High Commissioner at Danzig, who had framed the constitution of Danzig to general satisfaction and was drawing up a treaty between Danzig and Poland.

SUPPRESSING DISEASE

The League, Mr. Balfour proceeded, was also dealing with the question of the threatened spread of zymotic disease from east to west, especially in Poland. The League acted through the Red Cross societies and had appealed to the Nations for funds. The League was supervising the return of prisoners from Russia to Europe and vice versa. Furthermore it was considering the question of international finance and the dislocation of credit, with regard to which a meeting of experts would be held.

Mr. Balfour, continuing, said that the League was doing its best to find a European power to undertake the mandate for Armenia. Some nations were prepared to supply the mandatory with the necessary resources.

PROTESTS "SUPER-STATE"

Turning from the work of the League, Mr. Balfour proceeded to protest against "the activities of enthusiasts who were urging the creation of a super-state to direct the forces levied and paid by the sovereign states of the world." He declared that the problem of bringing order out of chaos must be dealt with by the Supreme Council, otherwise those who were throwing that burden upon the League were doing it the greatest possible disservice. If the League were overloaded, it would assuredly breakdown and the most promising effort hitherto made in the direction of a new civilisation would be destroyed.

Mr. Asquith, following Mr. Balfour, said that he hoped that the victorious Powers would not be slow to set the example with regard to disarmament. He asked whether the Polish aggression did not come within article II of the League Covenant, whether the mandate for Palestine came from the League and similarly with regard to Mesopotamia. He urged the winding up of the Supreme Council in order to let the League become a reality.

DECISION ON MANDATES

Lord Robert Cecil declared that the lack of a formal decision regarding the mandates for the former German possessions in Africa was producing very deplorable conditions, and he urged that all of these should be settled at the earliest possible moment.

There was no room, Lord Robert Cecil went on, for two supreme international bodies such as the Supreme Council and the Council of the League of Nations. With regard to America, it was difficult for us to discuss freely her position, but he was sure that nothing would encourage our friends in America more than for us to be able to argue with them that as the League had accomplished so much in the preservation of peace, it was undesirable that they should stand aside in the great work.

"ABJECT SUBMISSION"

Mr. Balfour replying said that Lord Robert Cecil was the most intolerant man on this subject he had ever known. Nothing but abject submission not only to the broad principles on which he went but to every detail of carrying them out would satisfy him.

With regard to Poland, the conditions contemplated by the League were:—Two nations approaching a state of war and the League intervening and saying 'You must not fight until all the machinery of law and arbitration is brought into play.' Mr. Balfour declared that he could not conceive a more difficult or more doubtful case, because not only was the war going on, but it was a war between Powers not recognised by any nation in the world.

FREE THE UKRANIANS

The Poles asserted, rightly or wrongly, that one effect of their intervention was to free the Ukrainians from the Bolshevik yoke and that they had been welcomed as liberators from the Bolshevik invasion. To rush in on such an occasion, Mr. Balfour remarked, would be like rushing into a street fight and pinning the arms of one of the combatants, while leaving the other combatant free.

Referring to the question of mandates, Mr. Balfour said that the terms of the mandates were to be determined by the Peace Conference, but the use to which the mandates should be put was left to the League of Nations. That was what had been intended at Paris and consequently it was to be regretted that the mandates were not ready. Mr. Balfour would not say that it was a matter for the League to be blamed. It was due to the fact that the negotiations had taken a longer time than had been anticipated. The League would come in, when the mandatory Powers accepted responsibility for carrying out the mandates.

DEPUTATION CALLS

London, June 18.—A deputation from The League to Abolish War waited on Mr. Lloyd George, Mr. Balfour and Lord Curzon today. The Premier catechised the deputation, endeavoring to pin them down to details with a view to demonstrating their impracticability.

He pointed out that the Great Powers were already too entangled to supply forces to create an international police and that moreover, any discussion in this connection was idle until America came into the League.

Mr. Balfour inquired where the proposed force would be kept—in St. Helena or Labrador?—for, he said, if it were kept in France, it would not fight France and, if kept in Great Britain, would certainly not fight Great Britain. The Premier emphasised that any present attempt to force the pace would only destroy the League.

AMERICA MUST ENTER

Baltimore, June 18.—Mr. W. H. Taft, former President of the United States, speaking at a luncheon today at which the British Ambassador, Sir Auckland Geddes was present, declared that America could not escape the League of Nations, which would be adopted after the elections were out of the way.

He did not specifically mention the Irish question but evoked loud cheers when he declared that America must not interfere in British domestic matters, adding: "We must do to Great Britain as we would have Great Britain do to us."

Would Revise Penal Code In Straits Colonies

(Reuter's Service)

London, June 19.—In the House of Commons today, Mr. Walter Forrest suggested the revision of the penal code in the Straits Settlements. He affirmed that there had recently been several cases of men, sentenced to penal servitude for life for returning from banishment and that the judge, passing the sentences, had drawn attention to the fact that he had no option in the matter.

Lieut.-Colonel Leslie Wilson, replying, recalled that the Government's proposal in 1914 to curtail the term of imprisonment had been dropped owing to the unanimous opposition of the Members of the Legislative Council and pointed out that such sentences had been reviewed by the Governor every three years.

He promised to make inquiries with regard to the sentences, to which Mr. Forrest referred.

SETTLEMENT OF CHINESE EASTERN OWNERSHIP NOW HOLDS INTEREST

"Three Republics" Request Formation Of Board To Determine Status

CONDITIONS ARE BAD

Russians In Peking Trying To Force China's Hand And Regain Railway

BY NATHANIEL PEFFER
(Our Peking Correspondent)

Peking, June 17.—There are indications of various kinds that the difficult question of the Chinese Eastern Railway will soon press for solution.

Conditions on the line itself are getting steadily worse and a permanent reorganisation will soon be necessary if the line is to continue operation.

More important, the Russians here, apparently with the consent of the French, are trying to get China's approval for a meeting of the "shareholders" of the railway, to appoint a new board of directors; all of whom, it is safe to predict, will be floating pillars of the old Russian regime.

And it is to be borne in mind that the relations between Russian supporters of the old regime in this part of the world, and the Japanese, are subject to close scrutiny just now.

China has begun to manifest a more active interest in the line; some other interest besides that of using it as an excuse for contracting a loan.

Just within the last few days it has sent a commission of its foreign advisers to make a report on the situation. One the commission are Dr. J. C. Ferguson, American; Mr. B. Lenox Simpson, British; and M. Padoux, French.

The commission will spend several weeks in Northern Manchuria, along the line, to the Siberian border. It may also spend some time in Siberia itself.

Finally, the representatives in Peking of the new Far Eastern Republic, situated at Verdhneudinsk, are making definite proposals to the Chinese Government concerning the railway. They want a commission to be appointed representing the "three republics concerned," which shall hold conferences for the working out of the new status of the railway.

By the three republics is meant the Soviet government of Moscow, the new government of Verdhneudinsk and the government of Peking not one of which even fainty resembles a republic.

BASIS OF PROPOSAL

The basis of the Verdhne-udinsk proposal is that the railway is the property of the Imperial Russian government; that the Soviet regime has succeeded the Imperial Russian government; and that the Soviet government of Moscow has turned over to the new Far Eastern government all its rights in Siberia, including the Chinese Eastern Railway.

The logic is good, except that China has recognised neither the Moscow nor Verdhne-udinsk governments. That may or may not be unfortunate; but it is a fact that would weigh heavily in future legal considerations.

A PLAUSIBLE SOLUTION

Nevertheless, this does seem the most plausible solution. There is little legal basis for the claim of the Russo-Asiatic Bank. As a matter of fact, there are no shareholders in the Chinese Eastern Railway. The sole owner was the Petrograd government; which, from time to time, created dummy directors.

However, for appearance sake, to justify the pretense that the Chinese Eastern Railway was a commercial enterprise and not a political adventure a company was formed. That is where the Russo-Asiatic Bank enters. But the real ownership of the bank inheres in the legally recognised Russian government.

CHINA'S SOVEREIGNTY

While the sovereignty of the railway right-of-way is unchallengeably China's, that is as far as China is interested in the line. It has never put any money into it. By the terms of the original agreement, China had the right to put in roubles 5,000,000, but never did.

In exchange, however, for China's grant of the concession the agreement provided that the chairman of the directorate should always be Chinese. But this has always been an empty formality. The Chinese chairman has been a decorative figure.

CAN CLAIM RIGHT

China can claim the right to take over the railway without reimbursement to the Russian government on the ground of its sovereignty over the territory.

Further, it may maintain that, by the disappearance of the Russian government, the railway automatically reverts to China. However, this would always be a doubtful title.

The most practical solution, therefore, would be a temporary and tentative arrangement for the administration of the line, pending the unwinding of the legal tangles resulting from the Russian revolution.

THREE INTERESTS

The three interests involved are Russia, Siberia and China. But there is no government, either in Russia or Siberia, that is recognised by China.

A short-cut would be recognition of Moscow, of course. There is little doubt in anybody's mind that it is merely a matter of a short time before Europe and America will do that, and China may as well get whatever advantage lies in anticipating their action, especially as Moscow has made China alluring offers.

But vigorousness and daring are not to be expected from the government here, especially when there really is no government. The situation seems to remain in dilemma, therefore, until some party will force it to decision. Then the chances are that China will lose.

TO CLOSE DOWN IRISH RAILWAYS AS STRIKE CURE

Britain Refuses To Stop Shipping Troops And Munitions To Erin

(Reuter's Service)

London, June 19.—Mr. J. H. Thomas, the railway men's leader, states that a reputation of railwaymen yesterday proposed to Mr. Lloyd George that the Government should cease sending troops and munitions to Ireland, and declared that, in return, the railway men would appeal to the Irish people to suppress crime, violence and outrages of all kinds.

The railwaymen further proposed that, during the truce, the British and Irish trade union congresses should meet together after which the Government might confer with the executives of the two congresses, with a view to finding a permanent solution of the Irish question.

The Government, Mr. Thomas states, declined to discontinue sending troops and munitions but stated that they would do everything to avoid provocation and were prepared to meet any representation of English and Irish bodies, including representatives of Sinn Fein. But further than that the Government declined to go.

Mr. Thomas added that, in the event of a further refusal to carry troops and munitions, the Government intended to close the Irish railways, which would lead to a very serious situation.

NOT JUSTIFIED

London, June 17.—Announcing the decision of the Cabinet to grant the increase in railwaymen's wages, recommended by the National Wages Board, the Ministry of Transport points out that the proposed increases are not justified by the increased cost of living as the purchasing power of present wages already exceeds the purchasing power of the men's wages before the war, and that they can only be defended on the ground of the desire for improved status.

The concession will inevitably necessitate a heavy increase of railway charges, which are now approaching the point where any further increase would not bring increased revenue as it would reduce traffic.

LET IT STAND

The Cabinet, accordingly decided that the present settlement should not be disturbed for such a period as would enable industry and commerce to regain the stability, so essential to the community, except for alteration consequent on changes in the cost of living.

Moreover, should the increased charges fail to produce the necessary revenue, the higher scale of wages could only be maintained by the hearty co-operation of the men with the management with a view to effecting substantial economies in working expenses.

4,000 Mill Hands On Strike; Gobs Shoot In Crowd

One Striker Injured In Right Arm By Sailors' Gun; Culprits Caught

Over 4,000 mill hands from three Japanese cotton mills in the Yangtszepoo District are out on strike for higher wages. The strike was called Sunday night as the night shift went to work.

Three American sailors happened along in rickshas, saw the crowd and shot into it, hurting one Kao Yao-ching, a workman of the Japanese third mill.

Kao is now at the St. Luke's Hospital, while the sailors have been handed over by the police to the American Consulate.

COMPROMISE ATTEMPTED

Attempts to compromise the strike were made yesterday by the mill owners when they offered to distribute rice among the workers at reduced rates. The strikers, however, refused to return to work on the terms proposed by the owners.

As has been the case in several other instances where strikes have arisen from the increased cost of living, the strikers have not made specific demands. They call for a proportionate increase in pay to the rise in the cost of living.

The police reported late last night that there had been no disturbances in connection with the strike.

BOLSHEVIKI ARE EXCUSE OF MAN HELD FOR CHECK

Former Prosperous Merchant Taken To Harbin For Bogus Draft

An interesting tale of a man said to have been driven to crime by the overturn of normal affairs by Bolsheviks in the Russian Settlement at Harbin, Manchuria, was told yesterday by P. M. Kojemiakin, formerly a prominent business man in the community, and now under arrest here on a charge of having cashed a forged check for Yen 70,000 at the American Foreign Trading Bank. The prisoner is to start for Harbin today in the custody of Detective Sergeant H. J. Schmitt and Foreign Police Constable C. L. Fenton on the s.s. Sakaki Maru.

The Russian had Yen 5,000 in his possession when he was arrested here. He is said by the police to have admitted his offense and to have accused an official in the bank, either an American or an Englishman, of having led him into temptation. This official, he said, retained Yen 65,000 and sent him into hiding here.

QUICK DISCOVERY

Discovery of the alleged forgery came prematurely for the plans of the forgers. The merchant whose name was affixed to the check on which the money was drawn had Yen 100,000 in the bank and, unfortunately for the schemers, he decided to draw out Yen 40,000 a few days after the bogus draft was cashed. Notified that his account was overdrawn the merchant demanded an investigation and the fraud was disclosed.

The Russian arrested here was formerly a highly respected business man at Harbin and, it is said, it was because of his excellent reputation that he was induced to become an accessory to the scheme.

Philippines be included within the coasting trade area.

OPPOSITION IN U.S.

"Even in America there has been considerable opposition among traders against the first proposal. They took the view that not only was the proposal at variance with the provisions of the Commercial Treaty, but that if it was adopted, it would lead to the adoption of retaliatory measures by other countries. As a matter of fact, the British Government protested to the U.S. State Department, which reminded the House Committee of the advisability of reconsidering the proposal. Nevertheless, the bill has now passed the House on the peculiar condition that the bill be carried into effect when the Commercial Treaty is revoked.

MAY FORCE WITHDRAWALS

"It is not yet known what degree of discrimination against foreign ships will be enforced under the proposal to grant a special rebate of railway charges on goods carried by American ships. If discrimination is carried far, Japanese and British ships will be compelled to withdraw from the Pacific trade, and go by way of Panama and Suez. The result will be the monopolisation of the Pacific trade by American ships, and the monopoly mean a rise in freight rates. It is clear, therefore, that the proposal will elicit considerable opposition from exporters and importers and the American Government will find itself in a difficult position.

PHILIPPINES AFFECTED

"In the Philippines there is strong opposition to the proposal to include them within the area of coasting trade, and the report that the scheme has been postponed until 1922 is perhaps true. The fact is that it has always been doubtful whether America can extend the scope of her coasting trade to the Philippines. No until fuller particulars are received will it be possible to say what steps may be taken by the Japanese Government to protect Japanese shipping interests. We regret that a bill marked by inequality should have passed the Congress of a country which is a staunch supporter of the principles of justice, humanity liberty, and equality."

Dividends Above Average At Kiangwan Race Meeting

Main Event Furnishes Gripping Finish After Throng Sees One Pony And Rider Fall

The outsiders—the also-rahs—had their innings yesterday at Kiangwan for a fair proportion of the nine events of the Recreation Club's sixty-seventh meeting was for non-winners of the season. With a big crowd out the weather was muggy, carrying the indication, however, that the rainy season is over. The track was heavy and that it was a rough day for favorites may be gathered from the run of the dividends paid. There was one of $480 and another of $228.

The racing was of fair standard without any particular features and while no track records were threatened in any of the events, the times recorded may be accounted good in view of the condition of the course after weeks of wet weather.

In the main event of the day, the Horseshoe Handicap, which was the eighth race, Trustland, The Ameer and Victory Star galloped in to a battle royal of the finish in which inches counted and the race was decided in the order given. Conqueror went down in this race soon after the field swept into the home stretch and a gasp of relief arose from the packed grandstand when the pony's rider, Mr. D. S. Li, was seen getting to his feet. He caught his mount and rode it unassisted.

Major-General Sir Newton Moore congratulated the Government on an arrangement which, he said, would be of the greatest value to agriculture and would mean cheap wheat for many countries.

Several members repeated the opposition argument that the agreement was incompatible with the League of Nations principle of the open door.

The resolution was carried by 60 votes to 20.

Unification Of Britain's Dominions Exploited In Speech By Lord Milner

Future Of Empire, Says Colonial Secretary, Depends Upon Perfect Understanding And Co-ordination Between England And Her Colonies

(Reuter's Service)

London, June 17.—In the House of Lords today Lord Harnwood drew attention to the necessity for devising machinery to ensure continuous consultation between the different parts of the Empire with regard to important imperial and international questions.

Lord Milner, Secretary of State for the Colonies, replying, emphasised that there was certainly no occasion for any nervousness that proposals would be made in this country that the different governments of the Empire should be brought into a new form of subjection.

He said that the time was long past when such an impression could reasonably be entertained even the most nervous of Dominions statesmen. We gladly accepted, he said, the position that there was no kind of authority in practice, whatever there might be in the theory of the constitution, that the Parliament and peoples of the United Kingdom claimed any longer to exercise over the Parliaments and peoples of the Dominions.

PARTNER NATIONS

"We frankly accepted them as partner nations of equal status," the speaker continued, though common consent we might hold the position of leadership as head of the family."

It was supremely important, urged Lord Milner, to the Empire and the world, that the self-governing Dominions and the United Kingdom should continue to pursue a common policy on all great questions of international affairs.

"It was supremely important, as Mr. Watt, the late Australian Treasurer, had said, that, in the councils of the world, the Empire should speak with a single voice, and, if that was to be accomplished, under present constitutional conditions, it would only be because the self-governing nations agreed upon a particular policy.

"There was no power in the Constitution, he said, to impose the will of the majority upon a dissentient. If they did not agree common action was impossible.

PERFECT ACCORD

Fortunately, said the speaker, the great test of experience of recent times—namely, the test of our war policy—we had all conspicuously agreed both about policy as a whole and every important chapter.

Lord Milner admitted it would be too sanguine to presume that they could always count on being equally fortunate.

"We must recognise," he said "that circumstances might arise, even in a great international crisis, in which the action of the Empire would be paralysed, or greatly weakened, owing to lack of agreement between all the dominions; and, consequently, that nothing would be done or much less effective action would be taken by some portions of the Empire than would otherwise be the case.

"That, he claimed, would be a disaster; but it was only likely to occur if we lost during peace-time the close touch with one another we had established in war-time.

WOULD NOT QUARREL

Lord Milner, continuing, said he did not believe that, on any great world question, different views would be taken by different parts of the Empire, so long as they remained in intimate touch with one another and able to consult before a crisis arose.

He said that he dreaded the possibility of a clash because action had been taken, for instance, by "one member of the family," or because some policy had been pursued by "perhaps the Foreign Office," over a number of years—of which the Dominions were unware—involving a critical position, when we should not find ourselves supported by the others of the family, simply because they did not know enough of the previous circumstances which had led to it.

CONTINUOUS KNOWLEDGE

Lord Milner agreed that it was of vital importance, on the part of such self-governing Dominions as maintain continuous knowledge of the policy which any one was pursuing and, chiefly, which the United Kingdom was pursuing with regard to foreign policy.

Dealing with existing methods of consultation, Lord Milner said that the Imperial Conference was of the very great influence. Its resolutions had, he said, a considerable effect upon the conduct of affairs of the different countries represented, and a good deal of very useful work in pulling the Empire together had been the results of these occasional meetings.

"We must" he urged, "regard the Imperial Conference as a regular, permanent organ of our Empire constitution, because it has a permanent secretariat to pursue various questions, collect material for future conference; and, by communicating with various Governments, to see the resolutions of the Conference carried out."

FAR FROM PERFECT

Although it was a very valuable instrument, he continued, the Conference was, owing to the long intervals between the conferences, very far from assuring that the strength of the Empire was continuously brought to bear upon the direction of the affairs of the world in a way in which the powers of any unified government could be exercised.

Lord Milner pointed out that there was no ambassador anywhere, representing the Empire in the same sense as he represented the United Kingdom.

Therefore the question arose whether we should not devise means for making the influence of the Empire as a whole, as distinct from the United Kingdom, continuously effective in the councils of the world.

TEMPORARILY ACHIEVED

This, he said, had been temporarily achieved in war-time, and in the peace negotiations, through the Imperial War Cabinet and the British Empire Delegation. It brought the whole force of the Empire to bear daily upon the course of world events.

The Imperial War Cabinet was as complete an executive of the whole Empire as could possibly be conceived, but it was bound to fall into abeyance at the end of the war; if only because the Prime Ministers of the Dominions could not continue to remain on it.

A WORKING BODY

It should be possible—if not continuously, any way occasionally—to establish an instrument of government, not only able to discuss Imperial affairs, but able to take action, representing the whole Empire, the speaker said.

Lord Milner said he was absolutely convinced that something more was necessary than we had got in the constitution of the Empire, if the splendid harmony, existing in war time, was not to be frittered away in peace-time; and if we were not to separate from one another, going different roads even without knowing it.

He was convinced that we should be able to hold together on all matters of world importance only if we kept in closer touch than it was possible to do merely by means of imperial conferences held every four or five years.

CO-ORDINATION ESSENTIAL

He was sure something, which brought the peoples of the different self-governing States of the Empire—who were actually responsible for the conduct of their affairs—into constant close touch with one another, was essential, if the Empire were to play the great role it ought to play in the world.

Something of this kind must be done, he said; something of this kind was in the minds of statesmen not only here but in all self-governing countries under the Crown. They were alive to the necessity for some more perfect organisation to keep the Empire on the same lines of policy; and if necessary, to ensure its whole strength being thrown into the right scale at the critical moment.

DISCUSSES THE LEAGUE

Lord Milner agreed that the success of the League of Nations depended above all on the British nation, who were a league already by nature, being able to speak with one voice. He believed that if they did do this they would hardly ever differ on matters of supreme importance with the United States; and then the two great Anglo-Saxon Powers could make the League a success and secure the peace of the world.

It was generally recognised in the self-governing Dominions, as in this country, said Lord Milner, that it was necessary to keep in more complete and constant touch, in order to ensure common influence and common action; and the fact that this necessity was felt in the Dominions was proved by the fact that the Imperial Government had been pressed strongly by all of them to hold, as soon as possible, a meeting, in order that the "constitution question" might be discussed in all its details, with a view to seeing how harmonious co-operation could be secured in the future.

MEETING IN 1921

Lord Milner had hoped that this meeting would take place in 1920, but all were agreed that it must be postponed until 1921. The meeting, if it were to be a success and put the future constitutional relations of the Empire on a good footing, must be a meeting practically of Prime Ministers, even though not exclusively so.

The conference said the speaker, should not be confused with the periodical "Impérial Conference." It might take its place for a particular year, but was distinct from it.

It was, he said, in the nature of a constituent assembly, which was to try to arrive at a basis upon which our relations with the Dominions would in future be conducted.

MEETING IMPORTANT

It would be a meeting of extraordinary importance; but, pending its constitution, in Lord Milner's opinion it was not desirable to put forward a particular scheme for bringing about that harmonious action of the different parts of the Empire which it was the object of all to ensure.

Lord Milner anticipated intense interest in and great hope from the meeting of the constitutional Conference next year. He hoped that it would not separate without providing the Empire with some organ of government, based upon the recognition of the complete independence and equality of its different parts.

THE LITTLE ONE'S COLD
And How To Treat It.

If your little one has a cold do not neglect it, for neglected colds lead to bronchitis, pneumonia and dangerous illness.

When the first symptoms of a cold are noticed give the child a warm bath and dry carefully. Reduce the quantity of food a little and give Baby's Own Tablets to move the bowels. Grease the nose inside and out with pure vaseline.

Mrs. James R. McDearmid, of Martintown, Ontario, Canada, says: —"I find Baby's Own Tablets the best medicine for baby I have ever used. They break up colds, cure sour stomach and the other little ills with which babies are troubled. They have made my baby bright, strong and healthy, and I would not be without them."

Baby's Own Tablets are guaranteed to be entirely free from narcotics and perfectly harmless. They are recommended in cases of simple fever, colic, constipation, indigestion, diarrhoea, teething troubles and worms. Sold by chemists, or post free at 60 cents the vial by Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., 96 Szechuen Road, Shanghai.

YOU BE THE JUDGE

"The evidence shows that you threw a brick at Casey," the Judge summed up.

"The evidence shows more than that," said Mrs. O'Flaherty.

"It shows that I HIT CASEY."

The evidence of successful business men not only shows that they pay particular attention to their printing and mail advertising—but that they get results—make a hit every time.

You sometimes get tired of the printed matter you are using. It dosen't seem to hit the spot. There isn't punch in it. When you feel like that ask us to plan your printing. There is no division of responsibility, we make good or we don't.

We print letter-heads, folders, booklets, circulars, posters, catalogues, in fact anything from a small card to a magazine. Call us in and give us a trial order.

Dr. Peter, Cholera-Killer, Uses Circus Methods In Campaign Against Enemy

"Y" Worker Wins Interest In Health Talks By Appealing To Chinese Love Of Parades, "Movies" And Mystery

(China Press Correspondence)

Foochow, June 14.—Anyone who knows what is meant by the rumors before the Barnum & Bailey Circus comes to town knows something about the whisperings among the Chinese as they saw Dr. Peter's show land in Foochow on the night of June 1, 1920. There were no tents to set up, nor elephants to water, but there was a line of coolies carrying three tons of health literature, apparatus, etc., used in the show.

A REAL SHOWMAN

Although Dr. W. W. Peter, A.B., M.D., C.Ph., is his own advance guard, publicity agent and main show in the big tent, yet he is running no one-horse show, and like all shows has to be set up in advance. He organises, he trains all the forces and puts on all the side shows he can. There may have been medical experts come to Foochow before to lecture to some selected group of highbrows on the microscopic analysis on the theory of health, but this is not Dr. Peter's plan. He is out on a city wide campaign to get the "Gos-pill" of health, not by sitting in an office and waiting for patients who are already sick to come in for foreign medicine, but by education to those in every walk of life. He is putting up his doses and labeling them in order that the people will take them. And they are not homeopathic doses either. He gets it across not by sugar-coating, but by stuffing his "dope" full of facts.

"MENTAL PILLS"

These pills, however, are not only taken through the usual channel, but are swallowed after being registered on the eyes, ears and mind. In the first place he goes out where the people are, he takes in the realm where the people live, and he uses two features in his show which any Chinese will go miles to see: namely, the movies and the parade, and as a result he gets health education registered in many ways on a large group. If his mysterious show in the big tent does not get them, his exhibit in the side show will, if he does not get them one way, he gets them another, and some he gets coming and going.

GETS PUBLICITY

Like Billy Sunday and all great evangelists he needs a staff of assistants, he needs publicity, and needs his plans carried out, and rightly so. It is his show. Therefore when he landed he gathered his lieutenants and instructed them in his plan. Some of this had been done long ago, or he would not have come to Foochow, for there are too many places that want his show put on and will build the necessary tabernacle. For months the Foochow Health and Sanitation Committee, which was organised to fight the cholera plague about this time last year, or a little later, has been raising the necessary funds for literature and were glad to get such a movement as this under way in the hope that it would prevent or help to prevent any recurrence of the tragic happenings of last year.

WITH Y. M. C. A.

Of course Dr. Peter is affiliated with the National Committee of the Y.M.C.A. of China and naturally the Y.M.C.A. of Foochow is behind the scenes and the whole Association staff, Chinese and foreign, has given themselves to the Health and Sanitation Committee to help set up the campaign, and they surely have been in the game. Mr. E. H. Munson, General Secretary, has been heading the arrangements and has not needed any gongs to awaken an interest in health education.

With him a whole group of workers has been setting the stage for the health week of June 7 to 12, inclusive.

RUN THE "MOVIES"

One man has been training missionaries and others in the running of "movies"—men who have never run "movies" before in their lives; others have been training medical students and teachers in the kind of "dope" to hand out with the movies, and the kind of explanations to make with the exhibits, etc., others have been hiring coolies to carry floats in the parade. Many of these things have been done before, but never on such a large scale. First he called together the missionaries, heads of hospitals, schools, colleges and churches, and it did not take long for Dr. Peter to sell his product. All he needed to do was to ask, "What is the use of spending our time training minds, without giving them training in the care of their bodies, with the result that we train a man, and put him into an important position, only to have him snatched away by tuberculosis?" As a result of this first move student audiences were open to him at once, and the missionary support was given him.

SAW THE GOVERNOR

The next scheme in Dr. Peter's program was to sell his health product to the officials. He called on General Li, Governor of Fukien Province. A time was set for Saturday, June 5, when the General promised to be present with his staff for an hour, and he came too, in spite of recent bomb outrages. He came in his official chair, with his bodyguard of soldiers, and he brought with him his staff, his chief of police, head of education, and many other prominent officials, nor did he stay only an hour. Dr. Peter put on his show for the officials, then he explained his exhibition, and since it was supper time, persuaded them all to sit down for a foreign dinner.

The health pill looked good to the officials, for they wanted all the Governor's soldiers to be exposed to it, and also hundreds of Government students, that assured crowds enough for many a show. The Foochow plan is admission by ticket only and it is a good thing for otherwise there would have been a panic every time. But by giving out tickets to special groups of people, they not only got the crowd they wanted, but they got them when they wanted them.

HEALTH TALK

One of the features of the show in the big tent, of which Dr. Peter himself is the center of attraction, is the health talk. The first three days of the week he held forth in the Walled City, with its population of 650,000 people and the rest of the week he took his show to Nantai, another part of the city, with a population of 250,000 more. Daily he crowded the Y.M.C.A. open air auditorium with crowds of 1,000 to 1,500, putting on four and five shows a day. A group of students would come in through one door and a crowd of officials and business men go out through another. To see Dr. Peter stand on the stage in front of the black sliding curtains adds an element of the mysterious.

You might think he was selling patent medicine, with more "patent" than medicine, or that he was putting on a sleight-of-hand performance, but you will soon learn there is not going to be anything of the sort, for at that time the gong will ring for the number of Chinese falling into their graves every minute, or he will break down the mistaken impression that China has the greatest population per square mile by asking how many China has per square mile.

THE WIRE-PULLER

His stage helper pulls a wire and up comes the number of dummies representing China and then he does the same thing for other countries, finally showing how Belgium and Holland have many more per square mile, but that the differences is that these countries care for their people and protect them against preventable diseases. When he comes to show the death rate per thousand of poor China, he has not enough dummies to represent it. Or he will ask "What will turn on the light of National health? What is the foundation necessary?" And his faithfuls bring in blocks representing many health laws, but says Dr. Peter, "All these are needed, but not until we have public opinion will we be successful in the campaign which we are waging." Then the curtain is drawn and in comes his helper representing China. He carries on his back a heavy burden in a burlap bag.

LIKE SANTA CLAUS

Like a Santa Claus Dr. Peter investigates and finds the cause of the heavy burden, discovering blocks representing tuberculosis, small pox, cholera, typhoid, leprosy, hook worm, etc. The curtain is drawn again, representing the passing of a few years and instead of China carrying a burden on her back, China is now represented by an athletic Chinese figure, the physical director of the "Y" of course, and has the burden of China now under his feet. Or the ringmaster brings on two wheels representing the Wheels of Progress.

MANY SURPRISES

One shows business men working for themselves and officials working for themselves, and all turning in different direction, with the result that the Wheels of Progress do not go. That is China at the present time. And then he shows China of the future, changed by everyone working together, and this time the Wheels of Progress turn forward. Thus all the time he is bringing out something new to add to the mysterious interest and to emphasise the facts of health education which he is presenting. Anything to wake them up to health condition and anything that will get their interest to act, is his motto. First it is a crowd of officials, then of students, then of girl students, then of laborers, numbering from 900 to 1,200.

Another way that he sells his idea is through his health exhibition in the side shows, charts and pictures on the wall, representing the travels of the fly from the garbage pail to the baby's food. Pictures and charts of all sorts, as well as models show the average Chinese home as it now is and other models show the Chinese home as it might be.

At each group of charts a student, who has been previously coached, is explaining to those that crowd around. A health faculty of 250 students gave days of voluntary service explaining these charts.

HEALTH MOVIES

There are also great numbers that never get into the Association Building. What about them? These are covered through another feature in this show, i. e. the health movie. Every night during the week, long before eight o'clock, the crowd assembles at ten different gates at ten different places in the city, using the two Association Buildings, the churches, open air playgrounds, guild halls, etc.

At any one of these meetings, numbering 110 or more for the week you can see from 100 to 6,000 people stepping on one another trying to get in. The usual greeting the following morning in good Chinese is, "Very crowded; no place to sit, no place to stand." The whole family is there, except that in true Chinese fashion, father sits on one side with Sammy and mother on the other side with daughter. Watch the response as the movie machine reels off films of better babies, cleaning streets and outdoor exercises. All the time Chinese medical students or doctors are explaining the pictures they tell how this or that is the way they do it in America or England, then he asks, "Is that the way we do it in China?" And he usually answers the question himself with an emphatic "No." But the humorous situations do not go over their heads either. The little prantics of Jimmy Jones awaiting his turn in an American clinic are just as funny to the Chinese as to any American audience.

SHOWS CROWDED

The picture of the National Tube Company's employes splashing around in the company's swimming pool looks just as good to these Chinese audiences, as it did to those taking active part in the splashing. Waves of laughter and applause go over the audience and you can feel the response to the "Come in the water's fine." Night after night the crowd comes, the only difference being that it is a little better mannered when it is ladies' night, for the Y.W.C.A. is working on the woman's side of the campaign and Dr. Sargent of the National Y.W.C.A. Committee is speaking to large audiences of Chinese women.

It is estimated that 14,700 either heard or saw the exhibition, health talks and health movies on the first day; 14,800 the second day, and a record of 17,200 on the third. The remaining days of the week at South Side increased in attendance, the outer movie show held Friday and Saturday night at the Y.M.C.A. playgrounds seeing 6,000 Chinese crowded together watching the movies for two hours.

One movie was held in the Middle School outer playground, where 3,800 stood up in the Chinese theater fashion under the canopy of the blue sky and looked at health education supplied in many ways, in pictures on the white paper pasted on the brick wall. Sometimes the crowds were so large that double headers had to be run.

HEALTH PARADE

Nor would Dr. Peter's great show have been complete without the health parade feature. They cannot get by it, that is all. He gets "em" somewhere and with its narrow streets in China, they have just got to wait until the parade gets by and incidentally at least get its message.

The parade is given every day in a different section of the city, with an estimated crowd of 25,000 to 50,000 seeing it every day. Of course the Boy Scouts are on the job and the Governor's band loaned for the occasion gives the parade quite a "front," and makes quite some show as it glides its way through the narrow opening left by the crowd. There are no elephants in this show, but it has flies and mosquitoes man-size, flying through the air, and rats running along the street. Then comes float after float illustrating Chinese life.

PARADE INCIDENTS

Perhaps it is a restaurant, with food exposed and flies traveling from nearby garbage pails to the food. Following is a float, which in contrast, shows restaurant with all the food screened in and the garbage cleaned up. Sprinkled all through the parade are the dead corpses carried on stretchers and the wooden coffins carried in the customary Chinese fashion.

Those in the parade who know tell us that in several instances as the parade went by one place a restaurant keeper had learned his lesson and when the parade returned in an hour or so, they saw the food screened in with brand new wire screening. In fact we are told that one man tried to buy some wire screening and was informed that there was none to be had in town, as it had already been sold to the traveling restaurants and food stores. Three shops which carry wire screening sold 1,500 feet in one week after the campaign.

Each float carries its own message, but to help it across students follow along with certain sections of the parade and explain their particular float. Then at the end of the parade a number of students distribute health literature and that is where another interesting feature comes in, but that is another story. The parade has covered more than 90 percent of the city's streets in the 6 days.

COMPLETELY MOVED

Never before has this city been so completely moved by one idea. The message of health has reached over 300,000 people in one form or another. A great wave of voluntary service enlisting 2,800 workers, men and women, put the campaign "across the top." Special meetings for women have been held in fourteen sections of the city. All types, classes and grades of Chinese were reached including the boatmen, ricsha coolies, students, clerks, business men and officials. Such an effort, backed by all the constructive forces, cannot help but have a remarkable reaction on the sanitation of this Provincial Capital.

It has been no easy task to enlist such an army of workers, finance and put over so completely one master idea into the minds of the men, women and children of an entire city, and so the Foochow Health and Sanitation Committee are to be congratulated for doing this great piece of constructive educational work. We bespeak for Dr. Peter just such a reception in every other city of this land as he carries forward his much needed program of health and sanitary education.

Warsaw Gets 17,000 Refugees From Kieff, Brought By The Red Cross

(Reuter's Service)

Warsaw, June 19.—The following communique was issued by the Polish General Staff today:

Northern Front: As a result of a maneuver, carried out according to a preconceived plan, Polish cavalry and infantry detachments surrounded and defeated one of the cavalry divisions of Budienny's Army in the Nadomysl district.

The Petit Parisien states that it was Budienny's cavalry corps which recently made the daring raid that forced the Polish Army to evacuate Kieff.

REFUGEES ARRIVE

Warsaw, June 18.—Seventeen thousand refugees have arrived here from Kieff in charge of the Red Cross. The Commander of the Red Cross unit relates that Bolshevik aeroplanes bombed the city and their artillery kept up a heavy bombardment.

Fifty fires started and no water could be found to extinguish them.

The Commander declared that German staff officers took part in the operations against Kieff and that the Bolshevik forces included Chinese.

Three Members Of Zemstvo At Vladivostok Murdered

(Russia News Agency)

Word has been received in Shanghai of the brutal murder of at least three prominent members of the Zemstvo (Vladivostok Government, dastardly assaults upon two young girls and innumerable other depredations, all performed by a roaming band of reactionary Russian outlaws under Bochkareff, former adjutant to Kalmikoff.

These atrocities, your correspondent learns, have all happened directly under the eyes of the Japanese Command, which keeps insisting that it is doing its best to prevent this kind of guerilla savagery on the part of Semenoffists against innocent men and women in Siberia.

Indeed, many of the cruelties are practised with the full connivance of the Japanese, who permit their echelons (troop trains) to be used by the renegades to aid in their fiendish actions. Since the regular Siberian Army was disarmed by the Japanese, on April 5, these "hooligans" and other criminals have had unbridled license under the indulgent eye of the invader.

M. Tretiin, chairman of the Russo-Japanese Commission, formed for the purpose of arranging a cessation of hostilities between the Partizans and the Japanese, has sent a written protest to the Japanese general, Suzutanagi, heading the delegation of his country, asking him to prevent repetitions of events such as occurred in Spasskoja (a railway station near Khabarovsk) where, on June 7, an armed group of "Kalmikoffs" under Bochkareff attacked the station, brutally murdered M. Kustovinoff, representative of the Vladivostok government and burned his body in the fire-box of a locomotive.

Spasskoja was, at the time, under full control of a Japanese military detachment.

The Bochkareff band then divided into two parts, M. Tzeflin reports, one remaining in Spasskoja and the other proceeding to Uchiri station (a short distance away) where M. Neginsky, a Zemstvo agent, was seized and shot; and where two girls were assaulted in the rear car of a Japanese echelon. This was done in the presence of Japanese soldiery.

As the Russo-Japanese Commission was passing through Evegenisyka, Mr. Tzeflin reports, the "Kalmikoffs" had just arrested and murdered M. Andrieff, former commander of the Nickolaievsk-Ussurisk garrison.

"And all this is done," concludes the protest, "in the sight of the Japanese Command."

CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.

Save the Babies.

INFANT MORTALITY is something frightful. We can hardly realize that of all the children born in civilized countries, twenty-two per cent, or nearly one-quarter, die before they reach one year; thirty-seven per cent, or more than one-third, before they are five, and one-half before they are fifteen!

We do not hesitate to say that a timely use of Castoria would save a majority of these precious lives. Neither do we hesitate to say that many of these infantile deaths are occasioned by the use of narcotic preparations. Drops, tinctures and soothing syrups sold for children's complaints contain more or less opium, or morphine. They are, in considerable quantities, deadly poisons. In any quantity, they stupefy and retard circulation and lead to congestions, sickness, death. Castoria operates exactly the reverse. It causes the blood to circulate properly, opens the pores of the skin and allays fever.

The signature of Chas. H. Fletcher guarantees genuine Castoria

"A medicine so valuable and beneficial for children as your Castoria is deserves the highest praise. I find it in use everywhere."

Mr. Light's $50 and Up Footlight Star Factory

"Want to Be a Maude Adams? Certainly!—A Mantell or a Booth? Of Course!—Even a Bernhardt? Easy!" But the Versatile Mr. Light Must Now Explain to a Federal Court Just How He Hoped to Make Good His Promises

"If Music Be the Food of Love—Play On!' Cried Mr. Light, to Our Surprise," Said Mrs. Hall.

ARTISTIC, talented, refined ladies wanted by Alexander Light to study, rehearse and play parts in his Shakespearean repertoire; evening rehearsals; good salary after professional tryout in May for the right character; send references. Apply by letter only, care The Coming Show Magazine, Hotel Savoy, New York.

A FEW weeks after this advertisement had appeared in certain New York papers two men presented themselves at the desk of the Savoy and inquired for Mr. Light. They were Inspector Honvery, of the Postoffice Department, and Detective McGlynn.

Mr. Light appeared in a cutaway coat, lavender striped trousers, a silk hat, pearl-gray spats. He carried a silver-headed cane. His walk carried on the best traditions of the school of the elder Booth.

The two approached him. "Mr. Light?" they asked.

"Yes, gentlemen, I am Alexander Light—say, rather, Alexander the Son of Light, for that is the English of our ancient Armenian name. But you have the advantage of me, sirs."

Thus spoke the majestically stepping person in measured, sonorous tones.

The two men had the advantage of him, correctly enough. They told Mr. Light so. They informed him that he was under arrest.

Certain "pupils" of Mr. Light, in fact, had made complaint to the authorities that he had promised to turn them into footlight stars for a minimum price of $50 up to a maximum of some hundreds. This, they said, he had guaranteed to do in a few months. They had paid their money, but still were far from stardom. Indeed, they had never even gotten behind the footlights in any capacity. They wanted the police to find out why. Hence the encounter of Messrs. Honvery and McGlynn with Mr. Light.

Mr. Light did not get excited or protest his innocence or depart from his attitude of immense calm, and by these tokens Inspector Honvery and Detective McGlynn say they suspected that he had been arrested before. This, they allege, Mr. Light admitted. He informed them, they say, that he had been arrested on similar charges in St. Paul, St. Louis, Milwaukee, Chicago and Boston. His real name, he said, was Gadzakian.

While investigating the complaints against Light the authorities found a typical case of his methods of instruction, they say, in the experiences of Miss Sibyl Hall, of New York. Miss Hall is a clever, good-looking girl of fine antecedents; she is a painter of considerable skill. Her mother, the widow of the late Charles Mason Hall, is the author of a volume of poems now in process of publication, and Miss Sibyl's sister is a musician.

"We live a quiet, rather secluded life," said Mrs. Hall, "and the idea of fraud never occurred to us. Mr. Light advertised for 'artistic, talented, refined ladies,' and we reasoned that a man who laid stress on refinement must himself be refined. Besides, he wanted players for a Shakespearean company. We would not have considered an advertisement for chorus girls, but Shakespeare—that was different.

"So we decided to answer the advertisement. Sibyl wrote to Mr. Light that she thought she would prove worthy of his training, and that with enough practice she might eventually be able to play a small part in his forthcoming productions. Sibyl thought it was audacious even to mention herself to such a great personage as we thought Mr. Light must be, but everyone always said Sibyl had talent.

"After the letter was mailed Sibyl said she wished she hadn't written it. She said that she would not get an answer; Mr. Light would not even consider such a novice. She thought she was foolish even to think of it!

"So we were astonished, embarrassed, when Mr. Light himself made his appearance the next morning. He wore a silk hat, cutaway, spats, cane, boutonnier—he was very imposing. Sibyl was fussed, as she called it, to think that the great man had called upon her in person, and so soon after she had written the letter!"

Mrs. Hall and Miss Sibyl received Light.

"He was very elegant and leisurely," Mrs. Hall continued, "and he delayed mentioning the object of his call, while he made pleasant remarks about the weather. Then, as Sibyl was speaking about something or other, he interrupted.

"'Ah, that voice, Miss Hall; that charming, bell-like voice. Marvellous, simply marvellous! I think—yes—I feel sure that after a course of lessons with me you could take the part of Viola in "Twelfth Night"—your voice is so wonderful; so musical. Music—that is it! Music, ah—for what says the Bard of Avon—"If music be the food of love—play on!" cried Mr. Light to our surprise," said Mrs. Hall. "As he said this he stood with one hand in his hair, the other making remarkable gestures.

"Then he told us of his successes and of his plans. He was to give a public recital in June at the Plaza Auditorium, he said, and after that his company would present a repertoire of Shakespearean plays on Broadway. Such pupils as he did not keep in his own company he would guarantee to place with other managers. He showed us a copy of his magazine and we were impressed even more.

"'Miss Sibyl will need a set of books on dramatic art,' he told us. 'Fortunately I have these books with me.' Then he pulled them out from beneath his coattails with a flourish. He learned I had another daughter and he wished to teach her also. But I told him my other daughter was too young. Then he brought up the question of money.

"'There will be expense,' he said, 'but that must be expected. The books, tuition, costumes and other incidentals will amount to at least $500, but in a few months Miss Sibyl will be earning more than this in a single week.' And then, somewhat hesitatingly, he asked for an advance payment.

"I explained that my income was received at lengthy intervals and that it would be inconvenient to give him a check for the total amount at that time. He was very obliging; $150 would do for the present, he said. I replied that I would give him a check for that amount, but that I would date it a week ahead, so that my funds in bank would not be overtaxed. He accepted graciously and began to discuss arrangements for the first lesson. He wanted Sibyl to come to his apartments at the Hotel Marseilles at 8:30 the next evening. I said I would go with her as chaperone. Mr. Light said that it was not necessary, as his wife—Miss Louise Chase on the stage—would be present. He showed us Miss Chase's picture in the magazine and a verse of hers, which read:

EMPTY SOX.

A tramp stood on a byway street
One cold December night,
The snow was thickly falling
The ground was covered white.
The Christmas bells and chimes rang out
And everyone seemed glad,
But that poor tramp kept standing there
And cried and looked so sad.
I touched him on the shoulder
And said, "Cheer up, old chap!"
'Twas then he spoke through tears to me.
"Well, I don't give 'er rap.
It's not for me I'm crying,
I'm used to only knocks,
But the little hearts will
Break at dawn over empty sox.
I've been a tough guy all my life
And hit the bottom rocks,
But nothing ever hurt, sir,
Like my empty Christmas sox."

"While I was reading this Mr. Light asked for five dollars in cash in addition to the check, and before we knew what had happened he was out of the house with the five dollars and the check for $150.

"At the appointed time we went to the hotel, and after waiting an hour or more were shown to Light's apartments. There was another girl there—to whom we were not introduced. Mr Light seemed anxious to get her out of the way. After a time the other girl left, and Mr. Light, after reciting part of Hamlet's soliloquy, complained that the hour was late and that he was tired and suggested that the lesson be cut short. We went away more suspicious than ever."

They did not know that the other girl—Mabel Smith, the proprietor of a specialty shop on West Forty-eighth street—also had a complaint to make. "Just before the Halls came Light had been trying to get me to cash the check for $150 which Mrs Hall had given him and which had been refused at the bank because it was dated ahead," Miss Smith says. "I waited downstairs to warn them against him, but they got away."

The Halls broke with Light after this.

But Light finally met his Nemesis, the Federal authorities say, in the person of Adolph Reitmeister, of No 88 Throop street, Brooklyn. Reitmeister had been a newsboy and had acquired some little money.

"I went to high school, and among other things won two medals for fencing," Reitmeister says. "I also obtained a one year's scholarship at Harvard College and was ambitious to take up playwriting as a profession. I thought that some actual stage experience would be valuable as a help in my college work. Light got me to give up my course at Harvard and considerable money before I became convinced that I wasn't getting anywhere. Then I got after Light.

"Light used to tell his male pupils that fencing was a great thing in Shakespearean roles, and he would then give us what he said was instruction. He did not know that I knew anything about fencing.

"So one day, after Light had given me three lessons of five minutes each, and each consisting in the recitation of bits of Shakespeare by himself, he said that the time had come to take up fencing. I had just been waiting for this chance. I slipped the button from my foil and went at him. In a few moments I had him running around the room in terror. Of course, I did not want to injure Light, so I just jabbed the foil into the tender parts of him.

"But this was not getting my money back."

The Federal authorities allege that they found sixty of Light's pupils who are ready to testify as to what he promised them and what they failed to get. They could have rounded up more, they say, but they thought sixty enough. The sums the Shakespearean teacher secured from them range from $50 up to $500. A Federal Grand Jury found an indictment against him. He has given bail in $5,000 and is awaiting trial.

Catalogued for Sale 1,726,572 lbs. (about 770 tons).

Sold 1,022,386 lbs. (about 456 tons).

There has been a general fall in prices since last auction on account of lack of support from London and New York. A fair amount of business was put through, however, both manufacturers and dealers being interested to some extent at the lower level. Sellers were willing to meet the market on account of the uncertain future and "bears" took the opportunity to cover. There was also some speculative buying at the low prices.

Standard Ribbed Smoked Sheet was only in fair demand and realised between 75 and 77 cents or 4½ cents less than last week. There was a good demand for Good F.A.Q. Sheet but Off Quality Sheet was difficult of sale.

Standard 1st Latex Crepe was only on offer in small quantities as usual and found a few very strong buyers covering short sales. This grade reached 77 cents, showing a decline of 5 cents on the week. Off Color Latex reached the same figure on quite a keen competition.

Very little Fine Brown Crepe was on sale. Dark and Barky Crepes moved off quite easily and realised comparatively high prices.

At the continuation this morning several buyers dropped out, thereby shading the prices for Standard Grades half a cent, otherwise there was no change.

TRADE WITH CANADA

New Import And Export Records In The Last Fiscal Year

New York, May 9.—In the fiscal year ending March 31 Canada purchased from the United States goods to the value of $802,102,187, and sold to this country goods to the value of $501,000,000. In the year's trading the United States had a favorable balance of over $300,000,000.

In both imports and exports Canada's trade with the United States established a new high record during the year. Imports exceeded those of the previous year by $51,899,163, and exports were $24,000,000 more than in any previous year. They were nearly three times the volume of exports in the year immediately preceding the outbreak of the war. High prices of newsprint, lumber and agricultural products, together with the big demand for these commodities, explain the large increase in export trade.

Canada's imports from the United States exceeded those of 1917-18 by $9,209,230, which hitherto had been the high-water mark.

Last year's figures are the more notable when it is taken into account that from them have disappeared the huge importations for the manufacture of munitions, which two years ago were flowing like a flood into Canada from this country. To some extent the explanation is to be found in higher values. But, on the other hand, the failing off in the demand of materials for munitions has been to a very considerable degree made up for by an increased demand for ordinary commodities and for materials that enter into their production.

TARIFF IN MALTA

A new customs tariff has been promulgated in Malta, of which the most notable feature is the provision establishing preferential rates in favor of products of the British Empire. It is not believed that this will affect the trade with the United States to any great extent, but the item that will be most keenly felt is that relating to motor vehicles, on which the general rate prescribed is 15 percent ad valorem, while the preferential rate is 10 percent. Aside from food products, which are little affected by the new tariff, motor cars constitute the chief item of import from the United States.

BRITISH AFTER MARKETS

Expansion Of Industries Is Shown In Foreign Commerce

British imports for March were over £176,000,000 sterling, exports £103,000,000 sterling and re-exports £18,000,000 sterling.

The value of exports has risen by £17,000,000 sterling, but one of the most encouraging features is the reduction of the adverse balance of trade from £61,000,000 sterling to £45,000,000 sterling. This is the lowest adverse balance recorded for several months with the exception of November last, when the figure was £36,000,000 sterling.

Imports of manufactured goods increased by £5,000,000 sterling as compared with February but, on the other hand, there was a decrease of nearly £9,000,000 sterling in imports of raw cotton.

As regards exports, almost the whole of the increase comes under the head of manufactured articles. The value of these goods was £16,000,000 sterling higher than in February, and the month's total of £83,000,000 sterling, bears testimony to the continued expansion of British industry. Cotton manufactures rose by over £6,000,000 sterling, woolen goods by £2,500,000 sterling, steel manufactures by nearly £3,000,000 sterling, and machinery by £750,000 sterling. Coal exports, however, show a heavy decline as compared with March last year. According to the American Chamber of Commerce in London, these figures are regarded as a striking improvement in the foreign trade.

NEW SOUTH WALES PRICES

The Attorney General of New South Wales has announced that a new fixation of prices will shortly be made by the Necessary Commodities Commission, under the wider powers conferred upon it at the close of the late session of the State Parliament. It now has authority to fix prices without reference to the Government for an increased number of commodities. It has power to investigate prices, costs and profits at any time, and to add any commodity to its lists, so that in effect its powers are practically unlimited.

SPELTER IN TASMANIA

Of the 200,000 tons of spelter which it is estimated that the British Empire uses annually, approximately one-fifth will be produced, upon the early completion of the plans being carried out, by the Electrolytic Zinc Company's plant at Risdon, Tasmania, which will treat the Broken Hill concentrates formerly exported to Germany, France and Belgium for treatment.

CRIPPLE CREEK ON WANE

Scene Of Famous Gold Rush Reduced To 2,325 Inhabitants

Washington, May 14.—Cripple Creek, Col., which not so long ago saw its population increased daily by hundreds of gold seekers, is apparently going the way of many another Western mining bonanza town. The 1920 census figures made public today give it only 2,325 inhabitants, a decrease of 3,877 or 62.5 percent since the 1910 census.

On the other hand, Casper, Wyo., in the same period has gained 8,808 residents and now has a population of 11,447. In percentage the gain of 333.8 percent ranks among the highest yet reported.

Cohoes, N. Y., has lost 1,722 inhabitants since 1910, the decrease of 7 percent bringing its present population down to 22,987.

Canton, Ohio, and Oil City, Pa., show gains, the former's present population of 87,091 representing an increase of 36,874 or 73.4 percent. The latter with 21,274 residents has gained 5,617 or 35.9 percent.

KINGMAN & BROS.
How to Preserve the Teeth
In order to keep the teeth in a good condition scientific precaution must be taken. Through negligence, decay and numerous other affections such as tooth-ache, dental periostitis esteo-periostitis, necrosis of the jaw, etc., may arise. During the process of ingestion, there are settled on the teeth, some deposits of mineral and organic matters, called tartar, which possesses a morbid power of pressing the gum. As an inevitable result of the presence of this tartar, the teeth will become elongated and movable and will, by degrees, absorb away the enamel, leading ultimately to the decay and degeneration of the teeth. The tartar is so hard and resistant to the process of brushing that it cannot be scraped off except with dental instruments specially devised for that purpose.
Dr. KINGMAN offers to the public his service for preserving their teeth at an annual subscription Fee of $10.00 per head to be paid in advance.
The work to be done by Dr. KINGMAN to the subscribers consists in:—
(1) Cleaning of the teeth quarterly
(2) Filing with gold platinum alloy only, when the teeth present holes.
(3) Inspecting the teeth at any time at the desire of the subscribers.

The Piece-Goods Crisis

LOCAL Chinese merchants, especially those dealing in piece-goods, find themselves suffering severely from the slump in exchange, and they have appealed to the foreign import houses with which they have forward contracts to help them out. They have been gambling in exchange and they now face a loss which they claim they are unable to meet. In effect they ask the foreign hongs to carry them, that is, to grant extensions of time or to bear the loss.

The situation is somewhat complicated by the fact that, lured by the attractive position of silver, many Chinese have entered the market who had no business to be dealing in piece-goods. They were, in part enabled to get a footing by the fact that there are a number of new foreign firms in the field striving to obtain business. A Chinese has been able to approach one of these new firms as a regular dealer and make a forward contract on which, if silver had up, he would make a good profit, and many of them made good profits. But when exchange slumps, as in the present instance, they are unable to pay, and to save the market the more experienced dealers are forced to resort to the present scheme.

The position is no doubt one of extreme humiliation to the well-established piece-goods men. We are informed, however, that the actual situation is not nearly so bad as it has been pictured. It is largely a question of sitting tight and refusing to become panicky. Worse crises were faced in 1905, 1907-08 and 1910. Above all, the estimate of a possible loss of Tls. 60,000,000 is said to be many times exaggerated.

It may be difficult to "unscramble the eggs" but, in spite of Harriman's historic saying, it is possible. All that is necessary is mutual confidence, co-operation and a determined refusal to listen to the old-wives' tales that have been in constant circulation for the last few days. It is not likely that any serious consequences will result if the people involved will only close their ears to the unfounded rumors that are being sent out, doubtless in many instances for personal interest, that would tend to impair the credit and integrity of sound institutions.

Heavy losses are every day occurrences in the business world. They are so common that we give scant heed to them under ordinary conditions. But with a crowd of he-scandalmongers inventing new tales every fifteen minutes the truth may be lost to sight. Committees of the British and American Chambers of Commerce are to meet today in joint session to consider the situation, and doubtless their recommendations will serve to clear the air.

Future Of American Exports

By FREDERICK J. KOSTER

(President of the Koster Co., speaking at the Foreign Trade Convention, in San Francisco May 12)

I am to speak to you upon the subject of the future of our exports. One might well be pardoned for approaching such a vast subject with some degree of timidity. It involves the element of prophecy, a comprehensive grasp of the capacities of one hundred and ten millions of human beings, of the resources of a land great in extent—and this, I take it, no man is quite equal to. I can therefore attempt to touch on upon certain broad, general aspects of the subject.

Export, I judge, represents the positive factor in the beginnings of the foreign trade of a people, a pioneer step in spreading the influence of a nation among other peoples of the world.

Let us consider for a moment the reason for this great gathering.

Thoughtful, practical men of business saw the developments of our national resources and the growth of industry, realised that American aggressiveness and ingenuity were rapidly developing a greater and greater capacity for production and that, in many important lines, we were certain to overstep the limits of our own powers of consumption. Their own foresight and, let us admit, prompted by the force of necessity perhaps in most cases, took them into the export field. As they progressed, they found themselves confronted by many obstacles. It is not necessary to go into detail, but the handicaps suffered in competition with the business men of those countries which addressed themselves particularly to the cultivation of foreign markets were such that it was deemed necessary to organise with a view to so awakening the American public generally to an understanding of the advantage of the widened opportunities through exports as to result in the creation of conditions that would not only remove handicaps, but would tend to stimulate expansion of American business in foreign fields.

Underlying it all is the great question of widespread human benefit.

There is no people so happy and contented as that which is busily at work.

Nothing so advantages humanity as that which stimulates the creative power.

Nothing so positively develops creative instinct as does a widened opportunity for productive effort.

I consider it basic that it is the duty of every producer to find the widest possible outlet for his product. Broadly speaking, the law of averages is likely to work to his greater advantage in maintaining a steady flow of his output. That in turn favorably influences the employment relation, in the effect it has upon stabilising the job of the worker, and so it reflects itself throughout American industry to the advantage of the whole body politic, from lowest to highest in the social scale.

Increased volume makes possible greater economies all along the line, which could not otherwise be effected. Ingenuity in method and invention are fostered, and the morale of an entire people is heightened through a widened opportunity for the creative and the productive.

Transportation facilities must needs be improved to meet expanded volume and that, in turn, reflects itself locally. There follows the establishment of a merchant marine; shipbuilding is a necessary corollary, and throughout the whole economic structure there vibrates the spirit of wholesome activity.

Whether the citizens of a nation exert themselves to find the widest outlet for their product or whether, on the other hand, they rest content with markets that are within easy reach and under conditions which involve no special acumen in supplying them is just the difference between the character of that individual who lives in mental lethargy, satisfied with what from day to day presents itself to him, and that one who in constantly increasing development lives to the highest of his capacities.

The development of an export trade imposes far greater intellectual activity, necessitating adjustment to widely different conditions and understanding of the psychology of varied peoples.

Interchange of commodities necessarily leads to closer intercommunication and since business can be conducted successfully only through the development of confidence, that relationship created between individual parties to a transaction leads to the establishment of greater confidence and mutuality between the respective nations in proportion as such transactions are multiplied, as between their nationals.

Government itself must establish a proper contact with the governments of other peoples. Its representatives must be carefully chosen so that they are of that character that will inspire confidence and win the respect and friendly attitude of the foreign peoples to whom they are sent and in the light of which attitude alone commercial intercourse can be successfully developed.

The better understanding of people of foreign types through the necessarily friendly basis of commercial intercourse leads to a higher respect, in spite of differences in type. It is not desirable that races should change their essential character, but it is important that we should reach, through education, that degree of enlightenment that develops respect for those of other races—not in spite of, but rather, even, because of their differing attributes, realising that through our very differences there is a greater variety of contribution made to the sum total of all the values in human life.

I cannot refrain from laying emphasis upon what to me is the one outstanding fact involved, namely, that commercial interchange which leads to closer intercommunication and therefore nearer human relationship is the greatest of all civilising influences.

The world must be brought into closer relationship for the greater welfare of all civilisation.

One section of humanity cannot profit at the expense of any other section.

It is true that in the field of competition one may rise above another, but in the ultimate, successful competition must take the form of superior service and even the follower under an advanced leadership is still an element of progress.

To cite an example of the civilising influence of the extension of exports, we might take the case of the Standard Oil Company's campaign in China, with its lamp and its kerosene, bringing light into the home and into the hovel—and where there is more light there is bound to be the instinct for greater knowledge and the desire for broader opportunity. That instance alone gives a clear and simple demonstration of the civilising influence that grows out of the desire of direct gain and advantage through extension of exports.

Now, the continuance of commercial intercourse is bound to lead to the improvement of the race; laws of sanitation must be observed or the people and the products of a country failing in that particular, are refused admittance to another; pests that attack various products must be destroyed, or, again, there comes quarantine, and so the effect upon this interchange, based upon the desire for wider export, causes conditions of necessity to be improved in many backward sections that may be opened to the avenues of commercial intercourse.

I shall not attempt prophecy, but the future of our American exports will depend entirely upon how effectively such gatherings as this carry the educational message to our American people. They must be awakened to the great advantages accruing to themselves directly through expanding to the utmost the markets for their products.

We must begin with a thorough understanding of what is involved in that priceless possession of all of us—the sovereignty of American citizenship—the obligation imposed upon every one of us to take part in the affairs of government so that we may have intelligent legislation that will not restrict our opportunities, but will tend to widen them.

Just at this particular time we have before us the great question of our internal transportation, and basic to the future of our business opportunities, both domestic and foreign, is the attitude of our people, that will reflect itself in such legislation and such acts of governmental bodies as will enable the great transportation systems to properly function and serve existing needs—and meet the expanding necessities of our commerce. Production is limited by the capacity for transportation.

The future of our exports will depend upon these things.

We of the Pacific Coast of our country are particularly concerned because across this great ocean, toward which our faces are now turned, and up and down its Eastern and Western edges, there are millions of human beings controlling resources as yet but inadequately developed. They need, and many of them will welcome, the influence that the ingenuity of our people can bring to bear upon their welfare.

There are great potential markets which require careful foundational cultivation, helping them to develop latent resources or to improve their methods so as to increase their purchasing power; and, on the other hand, we ourselves require a high productivity which, stabilised, leads to that degree of prosperity that stimulates our own demand and thus, in turn, improves the opportunity for interchange.

It is, to us particularly, of tremendous importance that this great nation should be awakened to the advantages of widening our possible markets. We are in close relationship, particularly with the millions of the people of the Orient, affording a great pioneer field for American ingenuity, American capacity and the products of American industry, and we of San Francisco, who occupy one of the great strategic points of that future commerce, one of the world's important national gateways, have a big sense of responsibility to the nation to do our part in stimulating that interest throughout the nation which shall result in our people profiting in the highest possible measure through these great opportunities.

At this time there rests upon us the big question of meeting, as the Western outpost of our nation, the problem of dealing fairly with those people of the Orient whose friendship and positive goodwill we are so genuinely desirous of winning and maintaining.

It is no easy task to face the questions that race prejudice raises—but we must meet them and solve them in a spirit of restraint and absolute justice.

The great future of our exports—and that means in the end the greatest opportunity for radiating our influence to the advantage of humanity, lies across the broad Pacific. It resolves itself into a question far bigger than can be considered in the cold terms of dollars and cents, or immediate material advantage—a question of destroying in short-sighted bitterness great values erected adown the generations, or patiently and sympathetically endeavoring to understand our fellow beings of different heritage, working out our problems with them in the light of such understanding, to our mutual advantage and the benefit of posterity.

Cheese Cooking

With cheese in such prominence in the dietary of the individual, the housewife will be anxious to acquaint herself with some of the outstanding points in relation to cookery and digestion of this most important product. When cheese is first purchased, a few minutes should be taken to properly care for it. Wrap it either in oiled paper or in a wet tea towel and store it so as to avoid any possible contamination from strong flavors or odors.

Being a ready-to-eat product, cheese in cookery is heated merely to melt it and incorporate it with the rest of the mixture. This operation does not require high heat. And too, being high in protein content, cheese must be cooked at a low temperature in order to attain a resulting product that will be easily digested. Therefore, in most made cheese dishes, the double boiler is employed. By this method of rediation, a cheese dish may be prepared without direct contact of high heat. If necessity demands a direct flame, the flame should be low and the time of cooking should be short.

American cheese serves many purposes. The effect of creamed cheese may be obtained by adding grated cheese to a small amount of cream. Cheese may be used in desserts. Its flavor is well liked in pastries, and in salads it is unsurpassed. Caution must be exercised in the adding of cheese to acid material. It is advisable in made dishes where cheeese and milk are to be mixed with acid, an acetic in vinegar, to dilute the vinegar with water, and then mix it with the flour which is generally used as a thickenng agent in cheese dishes.

Cheese left over may be used in extending cheese flavor in vegetable dishes, mashed potatoes, or in pastries. All unused cheese, if of sufficient amount, may be coated with paraffin and then stored away for future use.

The Man Of Sorrows

(Bishop William A. Quayle in the Christian Advocate)

A man of sorrows he, and guest of grief
Who walked in quiet on life's humble ways
And suffered all the slurs and dull dismays
Which crush on mighty souls. His day was brief—
A sudden splendor reft with storm. Belief
On him grew dim though great hearts walked through haze
Of doubt, and fogs of death with shouts of praise
And knew him glorious and acclaimed him Chief.
But now He stands, strange, uncompanioned, vast,
Tall as all solemn, purpling mountains are,
The while majestic centuries crumbling waste,
The blood-sweat travail of His soul is past:
He hath throned Love and wrought Redemption far;
And who "believeth on Him shall not haste."

100,000 Enrolled In Army Schools

New York, May 15.—More than 100 different courses of study are now available to the enlisted men in the United States Army, says a statement by the War Department, and 2,500 classes are being held in these courses, with approximately 100,000 soldiers enrolled. The number of subjects taught in the different camps varies from ten to forty, and the courses are different at posts, camps and stations throughout the United States and in overseas detachments.

"All courses, manifestly, cannot be conducted at all posts and camps," says the statement, "but, consistent with its facilities, every camp, post or station will offer the maximum possible choice in educational or vocational education.

"Henceforth the young man who enters the United States army will be given a course of training which will be equivalent to an industrial training school. When he has completed the years of his service as a soldier and returns to civil life he will return qualified for a definite occupation. Those who seek expert employes will look to 'graduated army men as probably the best equipped technically trained men to be had.

"The army training will, however, be broader than merely to fit a man into industry. It will make a better citizen, a broader minded man in every way. It will bring to thoroughly practical industrial training the culture that can reasonably be combined therewith. It is proposed to make the army not only a military force to be trained and ready in time of national emergency, but to make it a great educational institution where young men with the best mental, moral and physical qualities, and with the highest ideals of patriotic citizenship will be produced."

An example of the army work in education is found at Camp Mead, Md. Soldiers entering the army school there have the advantage of study in five educational and vocational departments—English education, business and commerce, industrial science, technical science and professional training.

Discussing the aim of the Camp Meade schools, General Hutcheson says: "Education is the process of leading the man out of himself and his surroundings into better and more advanced conditions. The man who refuses the chance to improve retards the civilisation of the human race. A free education is offered to men in the army. How foolish for a man who scorns the opportunity."

This school, like all others in the army, is equipped under the direction of the War Department. All books and supplies are offered free, and all that is asked of a man entering on a course is that he be earnest and willing to work. While the schools are under the supervision of the army the teaching personnel, buildings and equipment have been given to the camp by the Knights of Columbus, the Y. M. C. A. and the American Library Association.

The courses of study have been selected with great care, as well as the teaching personnel. More than ever a man's advancement in the army depends upon what he actually knows, and it is with this end in view—the rapid promotion of men—that the schools are operating.

Under the Department of English Education men receive instruction in civil service preparation, English branches, modern languages, mathematics and journalism. The Department of Business and Commerce covers clerical training, commercial education and typewriting and shorthand. Under the Department of Industrial Science the student is trained in blacksmithing, carpentry, theatrical staging, plumbing and machine shop work. The Department of Technical Science teaches drafting, motor transport, music, radio, telegraphy and applied electricity. The Department of Professional Training includes chemistry, preliminary dentistry and pharmacy.

It is optional with men assigned to Camp Meade to take one or more of the courses offered at the schools. But when a man has signed up with a class, attendance becomes a military duty.

Since the signing of the armistice, four motor transport training schools, conducted by the Motor Transport Corps, have been established and are now in operation at Camp Holabird, Baltimore, Camp Jesup, Atlanta, Camp Boyd, El Paso, Texas, and Camp Normoyle, San Antonio, Texas. These schools were established after several months of study by the officers of the corps and after it became apparent that the army was in need of men who had been thoroughly trained in the mechanical fields, and particularly in the automobile industry.

Upon completing his course at one of the schools the soldier is given a certificate of proficiency and his standing upon graduation from the first course will qualify him to undergo further training of the same type. By the method of progressive study adopted at these schools the soldier can finally graduate as a blacksmith or a general automobile expert. To have attained these ends he will have taken a complete course for motor assemblers, ignition and "trouble shooters" and a course in axle transmission and chassis.

Before graduation the soldier will have attended all lectures prescribed on these subjects and devoted himself for a period of several months to acquiring practical knowledge of the trade under civilian experts that would ordinarily take years to acquire under ordinary civil life conditions.

One of the newest educational centers opened up by the army for the training of officers and enlisted men in vocational work is the Signal Corps school at Camp Vail, N. J., which on January 1 enrolled upward of 400 students. This school began running October 1. No fewer than nineteen technical subjects are taught, preparing men for as many different professions which can be pursued either in the army or in civilian life after discharge.

After a course at the school, which runs an average length of six months, a man is given a certificate of proficiency in one of the following occupations: Lineman, storage battery man, gas engine man, auto mechanic, cable operator, cable splicer, cable tester, Morse operator, telephone engineer, radio specialist, radio operator, telegraph mechanic, telephone switchboard installer, telephone mechanic, stenographer, clerk, photographer (still or motion), meteorological computer.

This Signal Corps School now has fourteen selected officer instructors, three civilian consulting engineers, eleven selected non-commissioned instructors, and several privates. The radio laboratory and telegraph and telephone laboratory are supplied with the newest equipment, installed at a cost of thousands of dollars.

Like the Motor Transport Corps, the United States Army Air Service Mechanics' School offers an opportunity to learn trades. An important feature of this school is the fact that the man is under no expense while learning, and it is estimated that a man can reach the end of each month with more actual cash in his pocket while a student than he would if earning $5 a day in civil employment and paying his own living expenses. The army pays all board, clothing, housing and other incidental expenses of the schools. The Air Service schools are more completely equipped for thorough instruction in the various trades taught than any institution of their kind in the country.

J. Doughboy Discourses On Spring

In the Spring A Young Man's Fancy; Buddy, how d'yuh get 'at way?
Thinkin' o' Nora, Nell or Nancy; Well, Buddy, perhaps, but say!

This cool, green smellin' air
Leaves me with just one care.

Makes me dizzy feelin' an' trancy; Thinkin' o' Tent-tops, Gray.
Thinkin' o' long, brown roads a-stringin' over the doggon' hills;

Would near 'em holler
Forward Hup! An' foller.

Hearin' rifles softly pingin', thinkin' o' Jacks and Bills.
Watchin' the Sun go down a-winkin', or mebbe a game o' craps;
Standin' in long line, cups a-clinkin', hearin' messkit snaps.

Doin' guard still as stone.
In the night time, all alone.

Watchin' tent lamps, down there a-blinkin', hearin' a bugler's taps.
In the Spring A Young Man's Fancy; Buddy, how d'yuh get 'at way.

Talking It Over With Mars

One of the professors who is foremost in the movement to establish communication with Mars has solved the problem. He will not do his signalling from the earth, but will go up ten miles in a balloon. The balloon has been engaged.

This is a logical method of accomplishing the great idea. When he is up in his balloon the professor will be only forty-eight million miles from his objective. If he stayed on the earth he would be forty-eight million and ten miles from Mars. Being so near, as he will be, the thing should be perfectly simple. If you don't believe simple is right look it up in the dictionary.

Of course, also, the professor being up in a balloon will make it easier for the Martians to guess. If he stayed on earth and did his signalling they would not know whether it was the professor signalling them or some impostor doing it. And, in fact, it might be.

It might be Mrs. McGinnis shaking a rug out of the tenth story window of an apartment house. It might be a brakeman running back along the track with a red flag. It might be John D. making a pass or a faux pas at a golf ball. It might be some lady waving a red tablecloth at the engineer of a passing freight train. It might be Mrs. Smythe-Jones hanging out her washing on the roof of a tenement house.

These persons, innocently, might get the professor's signals all jazzed up. It is that way with wireless. Outsiders are always butting in and spoiling the party. Mrs. McGinnis, waving her rug out of the window might unconsciously wig-wag a message to Mars that would give them an entirely wrong impression of us and our civilisation.

No, it will be much better to have the professor off by himself. Up in his balloon only forty-eight million miles from Mars he can do his sigalling in peace and without interruption. He can talk on his hands, wave a red bandanna, shoot off a pistol, use a flashlight or place his hands to his mouth and shout and the Martians will be able to get the message. They will be able to recognise the professor and know the message is bona-fide.

We feel perfectly sure that we can trust the professor not to reveal any of our little secrets or back-slidings or minor offenses to our superior neighbors on Mars. He will not need to mention the late war nor dwell, however lightly, on our present peaceless peace.

Bobbie and His Pa

BY WILLIAM F. KIRK

I have jest com-pletted a song about Chicago which I think will be a grate hit in that fair city, sed Pa.

Is that possibel, sed Ma.

It is, sed Pa, how do you like these here words, & then Pa red these here words out loud, like this:

What is the city of cities now?
Chicago!
What is the town that shows 'em how? Chicago!
New York is fine & all or that,
London and Paris has Ee-clat
But on one town I'm standing pat
—Chicago!

That is a vary stirring and butiful song, sed Ma, I am sure the peepul of Chicago will like it. You ought to have sum musick for it.

I have musick for it, sed Pa. dident you jest heer the musick to it, dident I jest sing it to you?

I beg yure parding, sed Ma. I thought you was speeking the words, so that is the music you jest sang, well, well, sed Ma, it is vary inspiring, sed Ma.

It must be if you thought I was talking, sed Pa, you are a vary crickital, sed Pa.

Vary who? sed Ma.

Crickital, sed Pa, you have a harsh way of speeking of a literary gem like that thare song wich I jest sang for you, sed Pa. Sum day wen the wurld is ringing with praise of that song, sed Pa, you will think with bitter reegret of how you knocked that song, sed Pa.

But I toal you I liked the words very much, sed Ma. I think the musick cud be better, tho. That ought not to hurt yure feelings, sed Ma, you rote the words dident you, and dident I say thay was awe-inspiring?

I rote the musick, sed Pa. A frend of mine rote the words. That is why I feel mortar-fied at yure reemark, sed Pa.

Then I cud see Ma felt sorry for Pa. She patted him on the cheak & sed You deer boy. I was only fooling. I think the musick is fine.

I kind of thought you must have been joaking, sed Pa. Pa looked jest like the rising sun wen it is gitting up in the morning. Pa likes to have Ma brag about him.

reflects circumstance, so that woman, so to speak, inclines to be species, and man to be individual.

* * *

This, which is curious, women are at once the sex, which is most constant and most variable. Most constant from the moral point of view, most variable from the social. A confraternity in the first case, a hierarchy in the second. All degrees of culture and all conditions of society are clearly marked in their outward appearance, their manners and their tastes; but the inward fraternity is traceable in their feelings, their instincts and their desires. The feminine sex represents at the same time natural and historical inequality; it maintains the unity of the species and marks off the categories of society, it brings together and divides, it gathers and separates, it makes castes and breaks through them, according as it interprets its twofold rule in the one sense or the other.

At bottom, woman's mission is essentially conservative, but she is a conservative without discrimination. On the one side she maintains God's work in man, all that is lasting, noble and truly human, in the race poetry religion, virtues, tenderness. On the other she maintains the results of circumstance, all that is passing, local and artificial in society; that is to say, customs, absurdities, prejudices, littleness. She surrounds with the same respectful and tenacious faith the serious and the frivolous, the good and the bad. Well, what then? Isolate if you can the fire from its smoke. It is a divine law that you are tracing, and therefore good. The woman preserves—she is tradition, as the man is progress. And if there is no family and no humanity without the two sexes, without these two forces there is no history.

From The Golden Books

It is women who, like mountain flowers, mark with most characteristic precision the gradation of social zones. The hierarchy of classes is plainly visible among them; it is blurred in the other sex. With women this hierarchy has the average regularity of Nature; among men we see it broken by the incalculable varieties of human freedom The new son is that the man, or the whole, makes himself by his own activity, and that the woman is, on the whole made by her situation; that the one modifies and shapes circumstance by his own energy, while the gentleness of the other is dominated by and

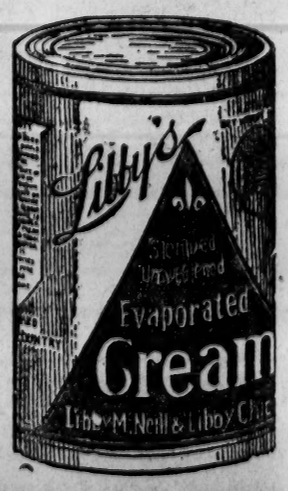
DELICIOUS CANDIES

Libby's CREAM



Never would you think that candy could be made at home so easily as this! It's no trick at all to make dainty bonbons, chocolates, stuffed dates and all kinds of fascinating sweets.

You don't even need to light the stove.

The base for them all is made by sifting two cups of powdered sugar and adding enough Libby's Cream to form a paste that can be handled. Work this with the hands until creamy, and flavor with any preferred flavoring.

To make coconut candy, roll small portions of this cream fondant in shredded coconut and stand on oiled paper to dry. For bonbons, color with vegetable coloring or add chopped nuts, raisins, figs or coconut. Or you can use the fondant to stuff stoned dates or figs.

The secret of the success of all these tempting candies lies in Libby's Cream. For its consistency is just right to combine with the sugar. Ask your grocer today for a can of this creamy milk that comes to you from rich dairying district and see how easily you can be your own candy maker.
